San Andreas Fault Swelling

WASHINGTON (UPI) Land along a large section of the San Andreas fault 40 miles north of Los Angeles has swelled as much as 10 inches, according to government scientists. Such ground swells sometimes precede earthquakes.

Adding to their concern is the location of the uplift astride a section of the fault that has stayed locked since a great earthquake in 1857, possibly causing a build-up of underground stress.

"The significance of the uplift is not fully understood," a U.S. geological survey spokesman said Friday. "We don't know enough to say it will be followed by an earthquake or it will not be followed by an earthquake. It's no cause for immediate alarm."

MACDONALD ADMITS SAMPLING

Few Firms Checked

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald admitted in the Commons Friday that the Anti-Inflation Board is only monitoring a few selected firms to make sure they are following the government's price guidelines.

It is impossible to monitor the 6,500 firms who have been sent the requirements under the anti-inflation program and the selective monitoring procedure is the same as that carried out by the income tax department to check on tax returns, he said.

New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent charged in the House that the board is monitoring only 350 firms or five per cent of the 6,500 affected. Macdonald did not deny the figure.

Broadbent then asked the finance minister to identify the corporations being monitored.

Macdonald would not.

"The sampling would be an effective means of putting those reporting on their operations under scrutiny, and it will be known that a scrutiny is being carried on," the minister said.

The New Democratic Party also announced Friday it will call for an emergency Commons debate Monday on the decision of the anti-inflation board administrator against Irving Pulp and Paper of Saint John, N.B.

The company was fined $25,000 Friday and ordered to pay an additional $100,000 for payment of wages exceeding guides set by the board.

The fines prompted an angry reaction from labor leaders because the ruling is expected to have great impact on the pulp and paper industry in eastern Canada, where about 15,000 workers are currently on strike seeking pay increases of more than 14 per cent.

The Irving increases were in the 23 per cent range and were ordered rolled back to 14 per cent.

Henry Lorraine, president of the Canadian Paperworkers Union which represents most of Irving's 500 employees, called the decision an "outrage" and promised the union would appeal the ruling to the federal cabinet.

"It's called strike-breaking," Lorraine said, "and no matter how you cut it, the prime minister of Canada, the members of his cabinet and the Liberal back-benchers who keep them there are party to just that — strike-breaking.

"And we're going to raise political hell."

Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the ruling upsets the collective bargaining procedure.

A spokesman for Irving said the company will comply with the ruling although it has not yet decided whether to appeal.

He called the $125,000 fine regrettable, saying the company had contravened the controls to allow its employees a chance to appeal the wage restraints.

Revenue Minister Bud Cullen told reporters the ruling was correct under the controls program, but added it was not entirely fair that Irving had to pay a fine in order to open an avenue for appeal.

Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the anti-inflation board, said he was pleased that the administrator agreed with the board's decision.

A True Love Story For Valentine's Day

By SALLY QUINN

NEW YORK — She had long blonde curls and large blue eyes. He had flaming red hair and freckles. She was eight and he was nine. They were in the third grade — army brats together in Kyoto, Japan — and they were in love. The year was 1950.

Every day at recess he would chase her around the playground trying to kiss her, and every day she would run away. All the boys would egg him on, and all the girls would help her get away.

She hated it. Every day she would plead with the teacher to let her stay inside during recess. She made up excuses, saying she had a stomach ache, saying she had to study, even once saying she had TB, something she had heard her parents discussing at home. To no avail.

This went on all year. Then, on Valentine's Day she came to class and found a huge, red and lacy Valentine on her desk. It said: "I love you and I'm gonna kiss you today."

It was too much. She had had enough. True love or not, this was Armageddon.

Recess came and everyone was primed. He began his onslaught. She ran around for a while, playing out the charade, then stopped. He stopped, too, stunned. He moved a step closer but she did not run away. Then another step. She stayed. His heart began pounding, anxious that he might have to go through with it. The boys were cheering and shouting daring him.

She stood her ground. The other girls stood there too, with widened eyes, in fear that he would actually kiss her, in admiration for her courage.

Finally he got within a few steps of her. He was trembling and his face was bright red. She stood her ground.

He hesitated for a second, just long enough for the boys to fall on him with jeers and shouts of "chicken".

He couldn't take it. He pounced. He had got within an inch of her when she leaned over and took a deep, vicious, bite out of his pink, freckled cheek. He let out an anguished howl and the other children gasped in horror. Blood began to pour from the cheek and he ran screaming, crying into the school building. She just smiled a tiny little smile and went off to jump rope with the other girls who watched her quietly.

He had to have several stitches and tetanus shots and he stayed out of school for several days. When he came back he never looked at or spoke to or tried to kiss her again.

She was severely reprimanded by the principal and told that if she ever bit anyone again she would be expelled. She promised she wouldn't. She didn't.

Two decades later, she was in New York around Valentine's Day attending a big opening night theatre party.

She wore a long black chiffon caftan, turquoise and diamond earrings. She was standing, talking with some well-known actors, directors and politicians when, abruptly, someone lunged.

Before she knew what had happened, she had been bitten — hard — on the cheek. She looked up in shock to see a tall, handsome red-haired man with a tiny scar on his cheek. "I've been waiting to do that for 20 years," he said. "Happy Valentine's Day."

He turned and melted into the crowd.

Bombings, Violence Rake Belfast, London

BELFAST (UPI) — Bombings and violence raked Northern Ireland today for the third day following the death of a jailed IRA hunger striker, and Scotland Yard asked citizens to be on guard against hidden bombs.

Gunfire aimed at an army patrol examining burned vehicles in Belfast wounded one soldier.

Bombs badly damaged a linen store, a primary school and a butcher shop in Belfast today.

No one was injured. Two youths who planted the bomb at the linen store were seen running away, and the shop was cleared of customers before it went off.

A 30-pound bomb blasted stores and offices in the city centre's North Street.

A man forced to drive a hijacked milk truck in which the bomb was planted shouted a warning and the area was cleared.

Another powerful bomb planted in the town square at Dungannon, 40 miles west of Belfast, caused widespread damage to stores and offices.

In London, Scotland Yard appealed for public vigilance to counter new possible bomb attacks.

A shrapnel bomb planted in busy Oxford Circus subway station at rush hour Friday was defused before it went off.

A police spokesman described its discovery as a "miracle" that saved hundreds of casualties.

Rory O'Brady, president of Sien Fein, the political wing of the IRA, issued a statement condemning a series of bombings Friday in Dublin.

"Such incidents follow a familiar pattern and occur at times of tension and high public feeling," he said. "They are calculated to serve British interests in Ireland and sabotage protest demonstrations arising out of the death on hunger strike in England of Frank Stagg."

Ottawa Has Second Look At Deal with Lockheed

Times News Service

WINNIPEG — Defence Minister James Richardson said Friday night the purchase of 18 Orion long-range patrol aircraft from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. is being reviewed.

"Lockheed's financial strength and business reputation has been weakened by recent events," Richardson said.

"We have to review the situation before we proceed with the contract, now under negotiation."

He said cabinet gave its approval in November to negotiate a deal with Lockheed to replace the Argus anti-submarine patrol aircraft. The negotiations were being conducted by the department of supply and services, the government's buying agency.

Meanwhile, the two top executives of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., shaken by bribery scandals rocking governments around the world, resigned Friday and were replaced by the former head of the New York Stock Exchange, who reportedly plans to be a temporary "conscience" for the defence industry giant.

Lockheed, the largest U.S. defence contractor, was struck by the bribery issue while still trying to recover from years of money problems that brought a $250 million Congressional loan guarantee to stave off bankruptcy in 1971.

Daniel Haughton, 64, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, and Carl Kotchian, 61, vice chairman and chief operating officer, submitted their resignations at a special meeting of the board of directors.

Robert Haack, a director from outside Lockheed's management ranks, was named interim chairman.

Haack, president of the New York Stock Exchange from 1967 to 1972, is a 35-year veteran of the eastern securities markets, experience he will need to handle dealing with major banks over Lockheed's $600 million debt load.

Pressure from Lockheed's worried creditors reportedly was partly responsible for the departure of Haughton and Kotchian.

A HARMFUL HOLIDAY?

OTTAWA (CP) — Creation of a new mid-winter holiday would damage the work ethic and encourage laziness, several Progressive Conservative MPs said Friday.

They were speaking on a private member's bill submitted by Mark MacGuigan (L-Windsor-Walkerville) to establish an annual holiday — to be called national heritage day — on the third Monday of February.

The bill did not come to a vote.

B.C. Tel Profits Up 35%

VANCOUVER (CP) — A substantial profit improvement in the last quarter of the year helped boost 1975 earnings of British Columbia Telephone Co. by 35.9 per cent, to $33,909,000 from $24,960,000.

Profit in the final quarter jumped 88 per cent, to $11,781,000 from $6,685,000.

Announcing the year's result Friday, directors said a $873,000 extraordinary item helped lift total earnings for 1975 to $34,882,000. Earnings per average ordinary share were up to $1.32, from $1.11.

The extraordinary item was interest on funds set aside for an income tax settlement.

The company's earnings statement shows operating revenues for the year rose 19.1 per cent to $254 million.

Basil Beneteau, president and chief executive officer, attributed the fourth-quarter result to added activity because of the six-week postal strike and increases in both interprovincial and Canada-United States long distance rates.

Beneteau said 1975 was the first time in three years that operating revenue increases had outstripped the rate of increase of operating costs.

HELPING HAND AROUND HOME

A new weekly column for men and women who increasingly are being forced to do their own repair work in their homes will be published in the Times, starting Monday.

The writer is A. J. Hand, and the illustrated column is appropriately called "A Hand Around the House."

The current surge of do-it-yourself activity started in the early 1970s, instigated by the recession. As the cost of plumbers, electricians, carpenters and other repairmen went up, people also found a growing shortage of skilled craftsmen in these trades: too often one paid a lot of money and still got a bungled job. At the same time, it had become socially acceptable to do things with one's hands.

"A Hand Around the House" is not only for people who live in houses. Many of its subjects will be of interest to apartment dwellers, as well. It tells how to fix faulty faucets, toilets, drains, electrical cords and outlets, as well as how to repair roofs, walls, basements and the endless list of things that can go wrong in a house.

A. J. Hand's father is Jackson Hand, former handyman editor of Better Homes & Gardens and McCall's, and author of many standard books on home maintenance, painting, furniture refinishing and woodworking. The son grew in a workshop writer's environment, learned shop and home skills, writing and photography from his father.

home workshop editor and left the magazine in 1974 to home workshop editor and left the magazine in 1974 to research and write a book on alternate energy for the book division of Times Mirror Magazines. He still has ties to Popular Science, which is in daily contact with the home repair market.

General Killed

LAGOS (Reuter) — Nigeria's military government said today that Gen. Murtala Muhammed, the country's head of state, was killed Friday in an attempted coup by "young revolutionaries." The coup was crushed by the government. Radio Nigeria named Lt.-Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo as the new head of state.

Plans For Gay Future Went Off Track

By BRIAN WILLIAMS

LONDON (Reuter) — A millionaire Irishman and an English racehorse trainer have been found guilty of an amazing betting coup that might have netted more than £360,000 ($725,000).

The story of Gay Future, a four-year-old chestnut gelding, was unravelled earlier this month in a Preston court in northern England, where Irish builder Tony Murphy and racehorse trainer Anthony Collins were fined $2,000 each for conspiring to defraud bookmakers.

It started in the backroom of a pub in Galway on the west coast of Ireland in August, 1973, when Murphy allegedly conceived the plan that might have cost bookmakers $725,000. An alert clerk led to his downfall.

Murphy spent the next year perfecting his plan. On July 29, 1974, a four-year-old chestnut gelding was sent from Dublin to Collins' stables at Tröon in West Scotland. Documents on the trip across the Irish Sea showed the horse was Gay Future. The animal, in fact, was a substitute.

Training gallops by the bogus horse were poor, assuring that the real Gay Future — still in Ireland — would not be well backed when he raced at Cartmel in North England.

On the first Monday in August, 1974 — a holiday in England — the real Gay Future arrived from Dublin for his English debut.

Travelling as an unnamed animal, the gelding was transferred to one of Collins' mobile vans on a lonely road near the Cartmel race course.

Collins formed a syndicate of Irishmen. They recruited a small army of bettors — nearly 100 — to place three-horse parlays on the real Gay Future with two other horses trained by Collins.

The syndicate knew the other two horses would be withdrawn from their races so that all the bets would go only on Gay Future.

HOT LINE IN KITES

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan has been undergoing a kite boom this winter.

An estimated 92,000 Japanese children got their kites entangled in electric power lines during the country's four-day New Year's holiday, power comanies said today.

They said the results were short circuits and outages that cost them $1.5 million.

The Japan federation of electric power companies reported in a survey of the problem that five persons were killed trying to retrieve kites from power lines and 21 others were injured.

The Holiday That Isn't . . .

Heritage Day is off but Heritage Week is on.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy announced Friday that proclamation of Monday as Heritage Day has been "recalled" by cabinet.

Instead, cabinet has designated next week as "Heritage Week" in recognition of Canada's heritage.

McCarthy said several provinces proclaimed Heritage Day "but there has been some confusion over the matter as a number of people have wrongly interpreted our action as making it a holiday."

"Any Heritage Day holiday that might be forthcoming would be Canada-wide and celebrated on a national rather than a provincial basis," she said.

Hertitage Day was to be a statutory holiday the third Monday in February to fill in the winter gap between New Year's Day and Good Friday.

Two year's ago it appeared the Parliament would declare the holiday, but the days slipped by and nothing happened.

There was talk again this year that the holiday would be declared during the current session, but again nothing was done and it was too late.

The Social Credit cabinet was apparently also considering proclaiming the holiday, but changed its mind and settled on Heritage Week instead and no holiday.

FLU SWEEPS BRITAIN

LONDON (Reuter) — An influenza epidemic is sweeping across Britain, swamping hospitals with patients, disrupting work in offices and factories and causing airport delays.

The number of victims soared to about 250,000 from 40,000 two weeks ago, says a spokesman for the Royal College of General Practitioners.

Sane People 'Held In Mental Hospital'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four persons considered by psychiatrists and review board members to be quite sane have been held at Riverside for many years because no government will take the responsibility of releasing them, Dr. John Duffy, executive director of the Forensic Psychiatry Commission said Friday.

Riverside — now called the Forensic Psychiatry Institute — is the holding unit for people who have been found "not guilty by reasons of insanity" by the courts; or needing psychatric assessment on the order of a judge. It also accommodates people found unfit to stand trial.

Duffy said "there are people who have been in there for years, perhaps 10 to 12 years, who originally came on being not guilty for reasons of insanity, for things like murder."

Duffy, himself a psychiatrist, said the mental condition of such people can be treated or may diminish in time.

"We have had medical authorities recommending release, review boards set up to determine if people are being held unnecessarily also recommending release, the recommendations have gone all the way to cabinets but have been refused again and again," he said.

He said he has addressed a cabinet committee in person about the condition of one patient, but release was refused.

TIRE FIRM ADS MUST RETRACT ON SAFETY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. will pay at least $750,000 to broadcast and publish tire safety advertising to settle a U.S. government complaint that previous advertisements misrepresented the safety qualities of Firestone's tires.

The government had alleged that Firestone violated a 1972 Federal Trade Commission order with ads claiming that certain Firestone tires are safe under all conditions.

The ads said the tires were of superior quality without having full proof for the claim, the complaint alleged.

WHY THE CRIME CZARDS REMAIN UNTOUCHABLE

OTTAWA (UPI) — Legislative restrictions on wiretapping make it impossible for police to go after top-ranking "untouchables" of organized crime, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said in a report Friday.

Under federal legislation police may obtain authorization for a legal wiretap only after showing they have reasonable grounds to believe the suspect is breaking a specific law. Fishing expeditions based on general suspicions are not allowed.

The Allmand report on authorized wiretapping in 1975 said the bugging operations resulted in a substantial number of prosecutions. But "none of these included the 'untouchables' of organized crime who . . . are not being investigated or detected because of the legal restrictions."

The most significant shortcoming of the wiretap legislation is the "apparent inability to respond to the clear and always present danger of organized criminals," the report said.

Such criminals are often able to hide their illegal pursuits behind legitimate fronts, i.e. the cunning executive, who is able to manipulate financial transactions to cover his real criminal activity, can go undetected until he commits a clearly identifiable listed offence.

"Although his associations, lack of legitimate income, his standard of living and lifestyle might well indicate nefarious dealings, there is no provision in law to detect his real 'calling' through interceptions," it said.

Last year's revelation that rotten meat was being marketed in Ontario and Quebec by organized crime would never had been made if present wiretap legislation had been in effect when the meat investigation began, the report said.

Allmand said that during 1975 a total of 563 authorizations to wiretap criminal suspects were granted and 451 authorizations were renewed.

prosecution that one member of the syndicate was Michael Morris, 27-year-old son of Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee.

Using taxis and chauffeur driven cars, the syndicate and their recruits placed small bets of £5 and $10) and £10 ($20) in betting shops all over London.

More than £4,000 had been wagered when an alert betting shop official noticed the money pouring in. Bookmakers stopped accepting bets and tried to lay off the wagers at the Cartmel track to drive the starting price down.

However, the course had been carefully chosen for the coup. It had no telephone links with the bookmakers.

Gay Future duly won the race by 15 lengths at odds of 10 to one. Then a bizarre incident took place.

Scotland Yard detectives had noticed the arrival in London of the group of Irishmen and feared they were Irish Republican Army (IRA) guerrillas. A special agent was assigned to the hotel where the group was staying.

The agent befriended the Irishmen in the hope of learning about terrorist activities and drove Murphy around London to collect his winnings.

The syndicate had collected £6,000 before bookmakers stopped payment and set in motion the inquiry that led to the conviction of Murphy and Collins.

The bookmakers now have made sure they have telephone links with every race course in Britain.

And Gay Future? He fell and broke his neck in a race on the day the trial started.

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Security forces suppressed an "armed rebellion" in the South Vietnamese capital of Saigon on Friday, the North Vietnam news agency reported today.

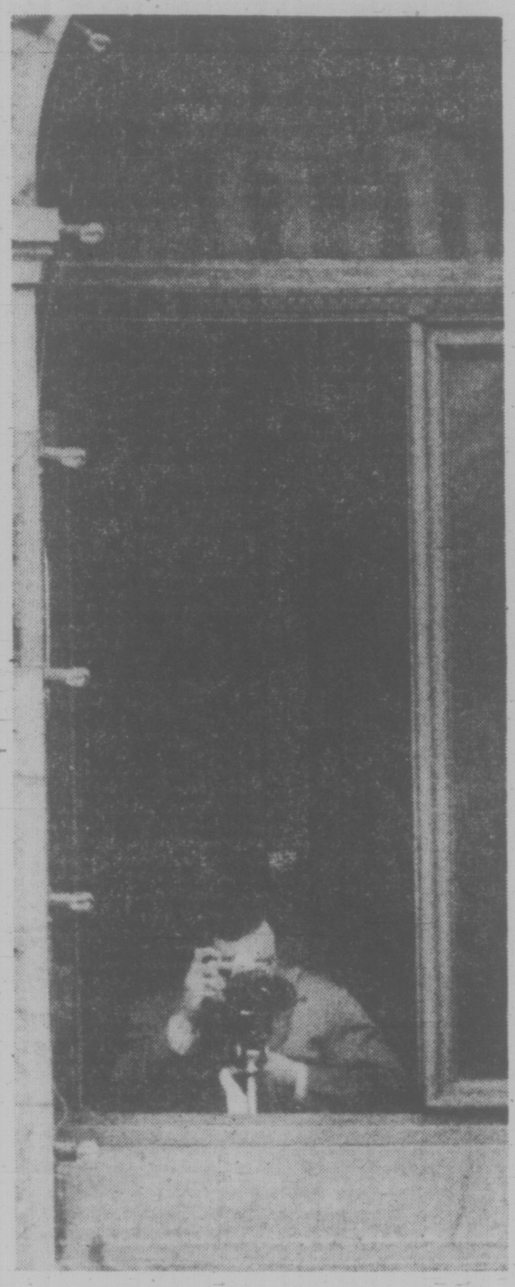
Spectrum's Big Night

Although it's been open only two years, Spectrum Community School held its first homecoming Friday night replete with basketball games, a dance and the inevitable coronation of a queen.

Kathy Bailey, a pert grade 12 student was crowned 1976 Homecoming Queen.

In the basketball games, the "Old Boys" — those from last year's graduation class lost to the present Spectrum team, 52-48. The "Old Girls" fared better. They won 31-21.

About 200 attended the reception and dance held at the school, the former Mount View Secondary, 3814 Carey.



CAUGHT IN THE ACT, Victoria city police photographer had cameras turned on him at Friday's rally at the Legislative Buildings to protest insurance rate hikes. Police photographer had stationed himself in second-storey window with a good view of the 2,000-strong crowd, but demonstrators soon discovered him and took pictures of his picture-taking activities. The good-natured protesters sang and listened to speakers and there were no incidents. (John McKay photo)

Inquest to Start Monday On Car-Bus Crash Victim

An inquest will start Monday into the death of Anthony Daveron, 30, of 1142 North Park, Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Friday.

Daveron died in Victoria General Hospital at noon Thursday, five days after his car collided with a B.C. Hydro bus at Glanford and Vanalman.

Daveron suffered brain injuries in the mishap which also sent bus driver Richard Thomas, 34, and four passengers to hospital.

One of the passengers, Bessie Allen, 88, was in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital for two days after the accident, but has improved and is in fair condition.

Thomas was treated for leg and arm injuries and released. The three other passengers received minor injuries and were treated and released.

Police said the impact of the collision caused Daveron's car to be hurled 100 feet into a field. Damage to the bus was estimated at $6,000.

'CONSTANT THREATS OF DEATH'

Tearful Patty Tells Her Story

Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — With tears streaking her face, Patricia Hearst shakily told a jury Friday she was dragged from her home, locked in a hot, tiny closet and mistreated and threatened with death by terrorists trying to start a revolution.

Taking the stand in her own defence, the 21-year-old newspaper heiress spent two hours telling the chilling story of her kidnapping and her first few days in the hands of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

She said SLA chieftain Donald DeFreeze constantly threatened her with death, pinched her breasts and "private parts" when she did something that displeased her captors, and said she would be hanged from the ceiling if she made any noise.

The jury of seven women and five men, who were not in the courtroom when Miss Hearst took the stand last Monday, listened engrossed as the pale, auburn-haired defendant described her abduction and abuse.

On Monday, a legal holiday in the U.S., the jury will be taken to two houses the SLA used as hideouts in the weeks after the kidnapping.

At the request of chief defence counsel F. Lee Bailey, the jurors will be shown the closets where Miss Hearst says she was kept blindfolded and frequently tied.

Miss Hearst said her captors said her kidnapping was one of five staged simultaneously across the U.S. as the start of a revolution in the United States and that its immediate goal was the freeing of two SLA members charged with the murder of Oakland school superintendent Marcus Foster.

Bailey led her chronologically through her life prior to her kidnapping, her abduction from an apartment she shared in Berkeley with her fiance Steven Weed, and the first days of her captivity.

Miss Hearst appeared near tears when recalling particularly painful moments of the night she was struck in the face with a rifle and dragged screaming from the aprtment.

It was at the aprtment, she said, that DeFreeze warned her for the first of "hundreds of times" that she would be killed if she did not cooperate.

"He just said, "Bitch, better be quiet, or we'll blow your head off,' " she testified.

She said at the time she was taking a full load of classes at the University of California with art history as her emphasis and had been living with Weed for a year and a half. They had been engaged for three months and she had starting picking out her "china and crystal" with her mother, she said.

"Did you belong to any political organizations of any kind?" asked Bailey.

"No."

When she was attending Menlo College, Miss Hearst said, she had even attended classes during a student strike.

Miss Hearst said she was told that she had been kidnapped because of the "crimes" of her father, Randolph Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner, and her mother, Catherine Hearst, regent of the University of California.

After several conversations about the goals of the SLA and its brief history, Miss Hearst said, DeFreeze told her a tape would be made "so that my parents would know that I was still alive and so that they would meet the demands of the SLA."

She said she would say a few sentences and then turn the microphone off and DeFreeze would outline points for her to make on the tape. She started and stopped the reel numerous times.

Miss Hearst breathed heavily while the 20-minute tape was played, and appeared once again near tears when she heard the voice of DeFreeze.

She had wept briefly the day before the prosecution had played a later tape of DeFreeze's voice and her own saying she willingly robbed the bank.

THEY'RE NOT awkward in the least, says Earline Taylor of New Orleans about her three-inch long fingernails. She also says that she has been offered $50 an inch for them by a local department store but won't part with them. They are also great for scratching those hard-to-reach places, she adds.

BOMBER DEADLINE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Simeon bombers have given Patricia Hearst's parents a 48-hour ultimatum to pay $250,000 to the defense fund of two jailed Symbionese Liberation Army members.

The New World Liberation Front said in messages to the news media Friday that, if the demand is ignored, there will be renewed acts of terrorism.

Randolph Hearst declined comment on the demand.

The NWLF, responsible for a wave of bombings in the San Francisco Bay area in the last six months, said in its communique that the Hearsts must "stop the lying that is designed to save Patty and bury" William Harris and his wife, Emily.

The Harrises are awaiting trial in Los Angeles.

Teamster Talks Short-Lived

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations between 97 B.C. trucking firms and their 5,500 union employees have broken down again after only a day of renewed contract talks.

Transport Labor Relations Association president Dave Chapman said the companies now plan to apply to the provincial government for the appointment of a mediator.

The negotiations were the first between TLRA and representatives of Teamsters' Union locals 31 and 213 since Jan. 9.

Talks were delayed by the Teamsters' reluctance to bargain while still faced with the prospect of legal action against the union by Johnston Terminals Ltd.

Johnston Terminals had sought special damages of $550,000 from employees, their union and teamster officers as a result of a wildcat strike against the firm more than a year ago.

The suit was dismissed a week ago by Mr. Justice Walter Kirke Smith of the B.C. Supreme Court.

Chapman said talks were broken off with both sides still far apart in their bargaining positions.

He said the trucking companies have offered union members a one-year wage increase of 10 per cent — "the maximum allowable under the federal guidelines."

The companies also proposed that discussions between the parties continue during the year to determine wage rates for succeeding years under the guidelines.

U.S. Blast

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (UPI) — A powerful nuclear explosive was detonated early today 3,825 feet beneath a snow-covered desert mesa. Mild shock waves from the unusual pre-dawn test, the second in less than 48 hours, were felt in Las Vegas, 125 miles to the south.

ONE MAN'S POTATOES ARE OFTEN ANOTHER'S

OTTAWA (CP) — Restaurant food left uneaten by one diner often finds its way back into the dining room on another customer's plate, Canadian Restaurant Association president James Rae said Friday.

Baked potatoes and sliced tomatoes are the most commonly "recycled" foods, he said.

He spoke in an interview of some of the other shortcomings of the restaurant trade and of future trends in the business.

Food which has fallen on the floor may sometimes be sent out to a customer, he said.

He indicated the CRA national executive meeting in Ottawa this weekend will consider expanding its national sanitation training program and other educational programs.

Rae said the new trend of the restaurant industry is toward providing more nutritious meals. The CRA is attempting to work with nutritionists and the federal health department to develop meal plans for menus.

He also said there will be a trend toward a la carte menus and away from complete meal offerings.

For instance, diners would order potato and salads separately from the main dish. He attributed part of the success of the fast-food chains to their a la carte policy.

The Shadow Of The Rope

Pragmatism and compromise are not heroic characteristics but they have served Canadians well through more than 100 years of union. That is why parliament's eventual decision on retaining or abolishing capital punishment won't be quite as divisive as it now appears. Still, the vote will be a tacit comment on our civility and humanitarianism which all the world will see. The Times is a steadfast foe of capital punishment. We have argued our case in a number of editorials over the last year. To repeat them now would be redundant.

The House of Commons will decide the issue, in some cases based on individual members' conscience, in others on riding polls. On this legislation it is arguable whether a member should vote his conscience or that of the riding he represents. Again, this must be a personal decision based on many variables including religion and politics, as crass as the latter may sound. Once the issue is decided government must enforce the law rather than circumventing it. The current situation in which Ottawa automatically commutes death sentences of persons convicted of killing policemen or prison guards is a charade which breeds cynicism for the law.

Prime Minister Trudeau's administration has done everything short of arm twisting to bring about abolition. We now hear that cabinet ministers will be forced to support the government while the rest of the commons will enjoy a free vote. Well, not quite free, since the Liberals plan a straw poll on how their own people will vote. Such loading of the dice almost amounts to coercion of his own party by the solicitor general. The government has taken an honorable position, fought hard for it, and may yet win the day. Why mar it with petty ploys that simply serve to cheapen a noble purpose?

Conservative MPs are not helping matters on this non-political issue by hinting that Trudeau's remarks in Victoria last Wednesday indicate that a free vote has been rejected. Let it be said once and for all, the prime minister did not say he would resign if capital punishment is retained. He was speaking hypothetically and said that resignation was an alternative a leader could consider. Only Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has indicated he will resign if abolition fails. Now, it would appear that even Allmand is reconsidering his rash remarks in light of the commons temper.

Earlier this week a Saskatoon court sentenced a person four successive life sentences for the sex slayings of four children. The reason for this redundant penalty was obviously to ensure the man was not released during his life span. It is clear that Canadians will not stand for abolition unless it is accompanied by life sentences that mean what they state. The so-called "law and order" package that the goverment plans to introduce is said to contain such a provision. Perhaps it will be enough to convince legislators to do away with state killings in the name of the people. We remain optimistic although the shadow of the rope grows longer this Canadian winter.

The Meal as the Message

A state of the province address. The very words have a pompus ring, especially when the messenger has been in power less than two months. Such excesses are forgivable when they come from callow governments. But what was this business of inviting publishers and news directors to a Thursday evening Vancouver dinner to finalize arrangements for the speech? Must the government hold hands with the press before it gives birth to its message? Our advice is usually shrugged off. Now this regime wants to break bread with us.

Perhaps our suspicious questions will never receive answers since the state of the province message has been postponed, along with the media mogul meal. Even the postponement had a peculiar tinge. When reporters asked the premier about the proposed dinner he appeared surprised. An hour after Bennett was quizzed, assistant Dan Campbell emerged from the premier's office, cancelling message and meal "because the package couldn't be put together."

It's a good thing too. Wrapping up the press and government in one package would be dangerous precedent. The question remains, who came up with such a bizarre idea in the first place? For a man who supposedly rules with an iron hand the premier doesn't appear to know what tables the other hand is setting. Snug little dinners with the press to finalize arrangements on a state of the province address is evidence of somebody's abysmal ignorance.

The perpetrator should be sentenced to counting fish knives in the legislature restaurant. Meanwhile, let the premier deliver his address. Press comments will follow soon enough. A free dinner and we might get a bone stuck in our collective throats.

MAURICE WESTERN

Back to Chaucer and 1455

OTTAWA — There is no end to language problems in the House of Commons. This week Stanley Knowles finding himself on a collision course with Chaucerian English, swerved only at the last moment, at some risk, quite possibly, to an impressive argument.

The incident is disquieting because the speaker by long custom seeks the guidance of the House when faced with difficult procedural problems. In this case he has been denied guidance or at least comprehensive guidance by a language deterrent. Knowles suggested modestly that the fault was in himself but since his research, as he had explained at the outset, was far more intriguing than James Bond, this seems unlikely. One can't therefore, exclude the possibility that Chaucer is too much for parliament in its present weakened condition.

The problem, which led Knowles back to 1455 and his moment of frustration, originates in the excessive industry of Elmer MacKay, a Nova Scotian Tory MP, with an apparently unlimited interest in Sky Shops. MacKay faces a civil suit, not yet properly before the courts, in respect to which he has waived privilege. This action, brought by a holding company, relates to observations about comparative prices in duty-free and other stores. MacKay maintains that it ought not to limit his right of inquiry into other matters, specifically tax matters involving a Bahamian subsidiary.

Henry VIII

Knowles, agreeing with this contention, was able to cite a variety of precedents, ranging from the case of Richard Strode, who was rescued from imprisonment by an action of parliament in the reign of Henry VIII to a more recent ruling by former speaker Lucien Lamoureux which arose out of action by certain Saskatchewan farmers, questions in the House and the appearance of a government bill.

It is evident, however, that it is something of moment, something which Knowles, in happier circumstances, would have felt bound to draw to the attention of his fellow procedural experts, that occurred in 1455. What it was, we do not know. The identity of the victim is hidden from us. Although the matter is on record somewhere in language which was indisputably English and has never been outlawed by act of parliament, Knowles, after study, has decided that the text is unsuitable for inclusion in a presentation to Speaker James Jerome.

Such reticence is, obviously, an invitation to speculation. Was the unknown member hung, drawn and quartered, a punishment which seems to have been favorably regarded in those days by a population denied the consolations of violence on television? Or was there a last minute reprieve? The details might well have been of interest to members on the eve of another debate on capital punishment. But Knowles, a suddenly reluctant James Bond, has contented himself with a tantalizing hint, only to draw the veil of language over the whole business.

There are, of course, other questions. What precisely is the significance of the mystery for MacKay, who was happily unquartered at last sighting? It is evident that, as the matter stands, Jerome cannot take official cognizance of it. Even a sneak reading of the records, with the aid of the Chaucer experts surrounding him, would be of limited value. There may, after all, have been more than one proceeding in 1455 despite the comparative lethargy of governments in those less enlightened days.

STANLEY KNOWLES
... Chaucer and James Bond

It is not often that Knowles swerves, in this fashion, in procedural flight. If his defence is that Chaucerian English would be incomprehensible (an appalling argument to present to Mr. Speaker, whose linguistic reputation is high), what is to be said of much of the legislation passed by the House after days of dubious argument, darkened all too frequently by passages of lawyers' Latin unsanctioned by anything in the Official Languages Act? There is nothing archaic, presumably, in the wording of the anti-inflationary legislation and yet the board feels obliged, at some public expense, to hold seminars up and down the country in order to explain it.

The impact of television on language has been of great importance. For reasons which have yet to be explored fully, it has caused our leaders, with one accord, to dispense altogether with grammar. This has added substantially to the confusion of the times. The prime minister addresses a message to the nation and immediately there are so many interpretations that he may well feel advised on the next occasion to couch the entire message in Chaucerian English.

James Bond

Even Knowles, who is respectful of grammar, has suffered not infrequently from problems of communication. As the ranking member of a club within a club, his arguments before the Speaker command the attention of the handful of distinguished members who share his procedural interests. It is apparent, however, from comments of other distinguished and restless members, that much of his thought, though expressed in modern English, is simply wasted on the seldom silent majority. This week, for example, Knowles had barely made his preliminary observation that the matter was more intriguing than James Bond when he had to contend with an ominous interruption from his own leader. Said Ed Broadbent: "There may be some dispute about that."

The unhappy conclusion seems to be that English in common parliamentary usage, like that sanctioned by the CBC, is a fallible instrument for conveying meaning. A good Chaucerian speech on an average day would probably make about as much sense as any and draw about as much applause. Knowles may well have acted in haste in discarding that 1455 precedent. All things considered, it would probably have been wiser and much more interesting to charge ahead with Chaucer.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Renaissance Chicken
—Three Tickets for $5

The twin Otter threaded the narrow green channel in the rain forest, nudging the wharf at Pearson College. A fitting vehicle and a perfect entrance for the prime minister of Canada on a rainy west coast day.

In 1968 Pierre Elliott Trudeau helicoptered into Beacon Hill Park to the cheers of thousands. Last Wednesday it was almost as if he was sneaking into town.

"He's only big with immigrants, little old ladies and kids now," remarked the jaded eastern reporter.

A mean epitaph for a man who just eight years ago caused an emotional renaissance among his dour, phlegmatic countrymen. Perhaps Canada is finally becoming as cynical as the federal Liberal party.

Following the prime minister around on his very political trip to British Columbia this week illuminated nothing. He walked through the various dramas concoted for his delectation like a man who was far away, nodding, smiling and mostly listening. Gone was the cocky brashness of old, except when he tossed facetious answers to those of us who are paid to hound him.

If the country is tired of him, it may also be true that he is tired of us.

Still, the Wednesday afternoon visit to Pearson college was a poignant reminder of everything that is fine and civilized about this country. The man in the brown leather trench coat drops into the rain forest; takes in student activities with warm eyes and carries on an animated discussion in French with a student printmaker.

In the dining room later he starts a platonic dialogue with students.

"Democracy . . . what's it all about . . . can we make it work in industrial societies?"

These kids from 40 assorted countries are not awed, but this is the prime minister of Canada, numero uno, throwing around the rhetorical questions.

"To make democracy work you need a great deal of self-discipline and self-control, and this doesn't seem to be a virtue which is present in the affluent society where everybody is grabbing more for themselves . . .

"I can think of only a very small number of issues since I was prime minister that have been decided strictly on a political basis."

A question about what will come first, Indian land claims or the Mackenzie Valley pipeline, causes the famous eyebrows to arch like a Jesuit faced with an impertinent and heretical proposition.

He answers to the effect that Indians appear to be waiting to see where the pipeline goes before they delineate their claims.

At the end he is thanked in Acadian-accented French by a Halifax girl. A song of farewell in Spanish is sponged up by the giant firs as he walks to his plane. The Canadian-designed craft roars down the channel seaward, vanishing into the overcast. Suddenly you can hear the rain running off the eaves. The philosopher king is gone.

Magic.

The next night in Vancouver it was more like the old shell game. Tropical tans poked their way out of pinstripes. Trudeau had changed the orchre shirt and casual jacket for a natty three-piece suit. It was to be a heavy duty night.

Facts and figures were to be absorbed with the grand marnier parfait. This was a pragmatic bunch. None of your "new society" stuff here. The ultimate failure of the Liberal party in B.C. could be seen through the after dinner smoke. Many of these well-heeled, beautifully-coiffed people had been active Social Credit supporters in the last election. Now that B.C. was safely ensconced in the arms of "free enterprise" they can afford to be $100-a-plate Liberals again.

A real insight into the ports of convenience of B.C.'s power structure.

Justice Minister Ron Basford listed all the things the prime minister had done that week in B.C. Opening a container port, a cyclotron and meeting Bill Bennett were mentioned.

"He should have the support of the media in this city for doing just that," said Basford of Trudeau.

Somebody in the press corps might have thrown a bun at Basford for this gratuitous insult to our collective intelligence, except the Liberals had placed us in an anteroom at the back of the Vancouver hotel's ballroom.

It finally ended, and like iron filings to a magnet, the people surrounded this patient, enigmatic man who is our prime minister. Off to one side stood David Anderson in a pinstripe suit. He is thinking of going back to Hawaii and chartering a sailboat until June.

On another side stands Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, who just arrived back from Hawaii that day. He is wearing pinstripes too and denies that he will become a minister in Premier Bennett's cabinet.

Drinks were three for $5 and the Mona Lisa salad was followed by chicken renaissance. The menu told the whole story.— G.R.O.

Munro's Mission

At 10 a.m. on March 8, 1976, at the citizenship court room in Victoria, the Railway Transport Committee of the Canadian Transportation Commission will be conducting hearings related to the application of the CPR to discontinue its dayliner passenger service up-Island from Victoria to Parksville. (Its service from Parksville to Courtenay has already been suspended).

At first blush, I am inclined to oppose this application. I want to appear at the hearing to do so, and would appreciate any views from readers either pro or contra.

My present opposition to the move stems from a variety of considerations, including the following:

a) the belief that we will ultimately need this line to provide commuter service to and from Victoria;

b) the failure of the CPR to indicate what, if anything, it proposes to recede to the federal (or provincial) government upon abandoning the passenger service;

c) the uncertainty as to how long the CPR will be maintaining the line for other services;

d) the final, and less measurable, regret to see rail passenger service disappearing in Canada.

Any arguments for or against any of these considerations, or urging others, should reach me before March 1st. Address your letters to me at Room 559, Confederation Building, House of Commons. I do not undertake to reply individually to your letters until after the hearings are concluded. — Donald W. Munro, M.P., Esquimalt-Saanich.

Insult to Injury

Premier Bennett says he was "shocked" by the new ICBC rates for those under 25.

So was I. My insurance jumped from $88 to $212 — a 140 per cent increase. I have a clean driving record, no accidents and no points. I accept the fact that the reason for the exorbitant increases is to pay the political debts of Social Credit to the private insurance companies but today's news that ICBC sales offices are to be closed down next year adds insult to injury. This means Social Credit is now going to pay off its political debts to the insurance agents and force the public to buy ICBC insurance through agents. As basic premiums have at least doubled as has extended coverage and as collision has now been changed to extended coverage with a commission rate of 10 per cent instead of the basic five per cent, agents will be getting huge increases in income for doing the same simple clerical work on the same coverage on the same cars as last year. How do the wage guidelines apply to the agents? They don't!

We can all save ourselves money by buying insurance from ICBC offices directly or the motor vehicle branch. If you do this you will ensure that the amount that would have gone in agent's commission will go back to ICBC to help lower premiums in future years. — R. E. Wood, 305-1960 Lee Avenue.

Priority Questions

What in the name of God has happened to our understanding of values and priorities? One news item in yesterday's Times tells us of lay-offs and serious money shortages in our hospitals, while another tells us of a $7 million expenditure on an administration and theatre building at the University of Victoria.

What the hell is going on? — Rosamund M. L. Fletcher, 2761 Tudor Avenue.

Paid For

We now know that our car insurance was subsidized by the former government. The gasoline tax, of course, was a fair and reasonable means of paying some portion of insurance, but unfortunately private insurance would not be able to re-enter this market if it were allowed to continue. (I wonder if any political party has been sued for breach of promise?)

The NDP made many mistakes in managing ICBC, including the fact that the rates did not reflect the increased cost imposed upon ICBC from many quarters and that those persons who were having undue accidents were not being penalized.

The hypocrisy of this government becomes shockingly clear when we witness the fantastic rate increases in car insurance, the possible doubling of ferry rates and the promised increases in hydro rates at the same time our premier promises to comply with the federal anti-inflation guidelines. The hypocrisy of the Social Credit party which charges its members $1.25 as annual membership dues (subsidized, of course, by the mining industry, insurance industry and other vested interests). We'll see if their rates go up but I'm afraid they just got what they paid for. — Bennett Camp, 2634 Cranmore Road.

Human Rights

Thank you most sincerely for your editorial in the Victoria Times of Tuesday, Feb. 10, entitled An Affront to Human Dignity.

We are in a strategic period when those of us more directly involved in the struggle to develop human rights are concerned about the direction in which British Columbia will move. An editorial such as yours is a welcome boost and I want you to know the members of the Human Rights Commission truly appreciate it. — Remi J. De Roo, Chairperson, B.C. Human Rights Commission.

Certain Subsidies

The Social Credit Government keeps stressing the fact that auto insurance and ferries should not be subsidized for the people, then how come they are subsidizing the mining companies, the oil companies and the real estate companies, by lifting royalties on mining and lifting the land freeze? The answer is very simple: because there are no rip-offs to be made in bent fenders, but there was and will be again in highways and land acquisitions and resale for complex developments.— Marie Greene, Nanoose.

The Ghosts Rewrite The Past

By HERBERT MITGANG
New Republic

NIXON . . . between Purina and Ayds

CALLEY . . . tooling his Mercedes

AGNEW . . . chocolate candies in Playboy

Three desperate symbols of the past that refuse to die — Richard M. Nixon, Spiro T. Agnew and former Lt. William Calley — will reappear in 1976. Peas in a pod of war and corruption, they are linked by the crimes they committed and the wounds they inflicted on the dream of American morality in military and public life. Their ghosts will become presences during the presidential election year.

Nixon, Agnew and Calley will come back to rewrite their personal felonies into mere misunderstandings, to fabricate their records on television and in memoirs (and, what is more, get paid for it), to try to leave the impression that it was all political and, anyway, all started a few Presidents ago. In their attempt to make forgetfulness next to godliness, they will be aided by a retinue of former flacks and spear carriers who have their own records to cleanse and their own tales to peddle. Against these will be marshaled factual and historical interpretations of the Watergate story by such solid journalists as Jonathan Schell and Elizabeth Drew; but their books, coming after foretastes in The New Yorker, can hardly be expected to have the widespread impact of the first Nixon broadcast.

The cosmetic game has already begun. In a remarkable interview in the Christmas issue of The Ladies Home Journal — remarkable for its lobbed questions and batty answers — Nixon advertised himself as a spokesman for American behavior. (He was allowed to censor parts of the interview before it was printed between the ads for Purina "Meow Mix" for cats and the Ayds weight-loss plan for fatties.) With straight face, Nixon declared, "We are so cynical, so disbelieving — it may take the shock of an invasion — in Korea or in Thailand. If American lives are threatened, we may regain our sense of belief in our country and our need for strength. We are a compromised country at the moment."

Apparently Nixon does not yet realize that he was the prime cause of cynicism and disbelief in government. After perpetuating the Vietnam war for four years, leaving blood and bombs on the land, the ex-president incredibly proposes new Vietnams to give Americans spine. Nor does he feel a need to restrain his pensioned tongue on foreign affairs even when his views may conflict with evolving government policies. After Franco's death, he issued a statement saying that the dictator who had once sided with Nazi Germany "unified a divided nation through a policy of firmness and fairness toward those who had fought against him." This, while Madrid's political prisoners still languished in jails.

For his future disclosures, Nixon has erected a double standard. When the Senate Intelligence Committee asked him to provide information, he immediately tried to negotiate ground rules that included not testifying under oath and exercising executive privilege. As a result of these impossible barriers to truthful testimony, the committee turned him down altogether. But for David Frost, who is packaging Nixon's television appearances for hundreds of thousands of dollars, a source familiar with their private deal discloses that he told the British showman: "You give me confidentiality and I'll give you candor." Secrecy and furtiveness remain the Nixon watchwords.

That other famous moralist, ex-vice president Agnew, also sees flaws in the American character. And so he is sponsoring a foundation designed "to promote, encourage and support the development of public understanding and appreciation of the advantages of a democratic society." It makes a kind of demonic sense: he got his, and still managed to plea-bargain his way out of jail. Agnew is now going around the nation and the world, selling anyone's goods and the line that the federal government's case against him for bribery, tax evasion, etc., rested entirely on testimony of people trying to save their own necks.

Perhaps a shade of truth will emerge in Agnew's novel, The Canfield Decision, coming from Playboy Press in the spring. In it, boy vice-president falls in love with girl HEW-secretary. "She was a forbidden chocolate candy — one he found more and more difficult to resist," an early version of the book went, though it seems unnecessary to improve as Washington literature. Then the fictional vice-president delivers his clincher. "In situations like this, where there's just the two of us, couldn't we forget the formal title and just make it Newt — the way it was that last night in Minneapolis?"

The sad Calley, who was convicted of murdering 22 civilians at My Lai, remains free — as do his untried superiors up the military chain of command. He tools around Georgia in his Mercedes-Benz, in contrast to those who resisted taking up arms and remain underground in their own country or abroad. Occasionally he hits the lecture trail along the Southern rim, receiving a fat fee for giving his singular version of the Rules of War. Calley also wishes to teach Americans how to live and vote in 1976. He has volunteered to help the Wallace presidential campaign. The governor took his name, rank and serial number but little else; it was an offer Wallace found he could refuse.

Calley's appeal from a court-martial is expected to be taken up by the United States Supreme Court this year on grounds of a claim of prejudicial pretrial publicity. But the army is not expected to put him behind bars regardless of the outcome. The former lieutenant and the former President are kin by war and political necessity. The tone of leniency and coverup of My Lai was set in the White House by Nixon — "in my role as Commander-in-Chief" — who changed Calley's confinement to cushy house arrest because it was expedient.

Accidents of time, place and policy link the names. Calley — the single name, recalled in Vietnam's best-known massacre while his commanders are unremembered and unconvicted. Agnew — drummer and boy novelist, who can now lecture us on justice and freedom because all the government parties colluded to let him plead no contest and conceal his crookedness. And Nixon — who was allowed to resign on the eve of formal constitutional indictment, leaving a presumption of innocence that was ratified by his handpicked successor's pardon. Despite the coming resurrection in videoland, the failure to impeach and let the whole truth out means that the books can never close on the Nixon Presidency's crime. Because of Mr. Ford's worst mistake, the country has turned the calendar into a presidential year under a cloud of deception, haunted by unfinished business in its own house.

After Abortion: A Wave of Baby-Killing Sweeps Japan

By MARK MURRAY

TOKYO — Despite the ready availability of cheap abortions, infanticide remains a baffling and growing problem for Japan.

Now the government has decided one of the reasons may be that young girls no longer know how to cope with the problems of caring for infants. It has also decided that it is time to do something to help.

In recent years around 200 babies have been murdered before reaching their first birthday, most within hours or days of birth. A favorite method was to leave the child to die in a left luggage locker. Since police cracked down on use of the lockers in mid-1975, however, there have been no further cases.

According to Matsuo Murata, a children's affairs officer, "deserting and killing children is an old practice, but the latest trend shows a distinct lack of respect for human life as society becomes more selfish."

Psychiatrist Noriko Sato says: "With the readiness of abortion women no longer have the same feeling about killing their babies. It's just an easy way of solving a problem. Their babies are not human beings and command no more feeling than if it is an empty can or bottle we are disposing of."

In the old days Japanese farmers faced with bad crops and food shortages used to lessen the number of mouths to feed at home by abandoning their daughters on mountain slopes to die. In the cities, poor children were left in the streets in the hope someone else would take care of them.

But sociologists say only a small percentage of today's infanticides are for economic reasons. Many are simply due to a woman's unwillingness to care for children.

It all seems to stem from the break-up of the traditional Japanese family unit. In the old days a girl continued to live with her family after marriage or moved in with her in-laws. There was always an older woman around with considerable experience in child care to advise the new mother and take part of the load off her shoulders.

That is no longer the case. In today's overcrowded urban conditions, a couple strikes out on its own, and while the husband is away working all day and probably drinking with his cronies half the night, the inexperienced wife is left at home to fret over her problems.

The health and welfare ministry says that, as a result, many worry themselves into suicide or kill the child in a fit of nervous breakdown. A justice ministry survey shows that at least 30 per cent of infanticides are clearly committed by neurotic mothers of this type.

As a first step, the health ministry is planning to start a pilot child care consulting service for young mothers in April.

This sort of help has not been available before partly because social welfare is still underdeveloped here, but also because of a long-standing belief that child care was a domestic matter of experience passed down from one generation to the next.

But some critics feel this only scratches the surface. Because of the difficulty in obtaining the contraceptive pill, abortion is the only backstop for the vast majority of girls who accidentally become pregnant. And for a number of reasons some are missing out, perhaps changing their minds when it's too late.

One bizarre outgrowth of this has been a sudden proliferation in door-to-door salesladies offering home-delivered condoms, complete with a gorgeous catalogue and a case full of samples.

Children's officer Murata, however, feels that the real problem is that "as long as the present civilization continues to emphasize selfish consumption and waste, this phenomena (infanticide) will continue to grow."

THE WOMAN BEHIND THE THRONE

By KATHARINE WHITEHORN
London Observer

The world stands riveted by the news that Margaret Trudeau, wife of the Canadian Prime Minister, Pierre Trudeau, has rung up a chat show and demanded to be let chat, saying that she is tired of being kept in the background, suppressed and "worn as a rose in her husband's lapel."

The pretty simile misses one crucial aspect of the case: that what really sparked all this off was an occasion in Caracas when Margaret Trudeau rose to her feet and sang, at an official dinner, a song of her own composition in praise of President Carlos Perez's wife. The host country, it has to be admitted, was delighted: some of them were even moved to tears. So were some of the Canadians; but not for the same reasons. And whatever you have to say against them, or the places where they should be worn, roses don't sing.

You'd think Canada had enough troubles at the moment, what with the unfinished Olympics and an airport a hundred miles wide to handle as much traffic per day as O'Hare, Chicago, does in half-an-hour, without having a prime minister who can't sleep at night for the sound of his wife practising her scales.

Our sympathies go out to him, but he might be cheered to know that he isn't exactly alone. The wife who, having been married for her warm, quiet, stay-at-home qualities, suddenly has her consciousness raised and decides to blossom out is a mid-seventies phenomenon, and a lot of chaps are taking it very badly indeed. British TV chat man Michael Parkinson confessed himself shattered when his pretty wife Mary got her own TV show; a director of one of our great soap companies has been completely thrown, not so much by his wife's working three mornings a week for a local novelist but by her sudden tendency to say things like "I am a person too," and "Why don't you pick up your own socks?"

Of course there are plenty of men whose wives have been self-assertive from the start, but it's a bit like women who get fat in middle age saying that there are plenty of men who like fat women: sure there are, but they usually marry someone tubby to start with. It's the man who thought he'd got a thin woman who feels so deeply cheated when the girl he loved disappears under a sort of private butter mountain, and it's the man who thought he'd married something shy and retiring who feels so taken aback when she suddenly breaks out of the chrysalis with an angry buzzing. Cries of "We wuz robbed" are echoing everywhere.

And the thing has awful implications for the rest of us, too. Just suppose she really does make a hit on TV, what are the far-reaching effects going to be? You can just hear the party machine grinding its cogs: "Yes, Joe Dope is a good politician, but I notice his wife's ratings have slipped lately . . . Sure, Beau Soap is a real leader, but his wife only cooks. Wonder if we could get her on the Galloping Gourmet show . . . ? Why doesn't Callas get married to a party man, Godammit? We'd wipe the board . . ."

It might be preferable, I suppose, to the current possibility of the horse opera hero himself making it to top office, if it's true that Ronald Reagan really has a chance of the United States Presidency. But I fear that this, like everything else, will probably rebound to woman's disadvantage in the end.

Sea-Bird Census Points Up Threat

According to a survey made last summer, about 480,000 pairs of sea-birds call the islands off British Columbia's coast home.

In 1975 canvassers from the Provincial Museum in Victoria completed an island-to-island census of the known sea-bird colonies between Race Rocks and the Queen Charlottes and their findings came as a bit of a surprise. Instead of the "millions" — a figure frequently kicked around when ball-park estimates of British Columbia's sea-bird populations are being made — the census showed that something less than one million birds actually nest here.

Add to this about a million more that are residents but not nesting, and our indigenous population is barely equal to that of one average island in the Bering Sea off Alaska.

Some bare statistics drawn from the survey reveal that more than 60 per cent of this population is made up of two rather insignificant, pigeon-sized species — the Ancient Murrelet and Cassin's Auklet — concentrated on Langara Island in the Queen Charlottes, and in the Scott Islands off Cape Scott at the north end of Vancouver Island.

Behind these range such species as the Rhinocerous Auklet, the Fork-tailed Storm-petrel, Leach's Storm-petrel and the Tufted Puffin which together make up another 30 per cent of the population. The final 10 per cent is composed of three species of cormorants, a murre, a guillemot and the Glaucous-winged Gull.

So what's the significance of this little exercise in numbers? Well, for one thing, it's a good place to start when considering the implications of an oil spill off our coast.

Take the two species that make up the bulk of our sea-bird population; both are plankton feeders selecting the larger forms of zooplankton found in scattered patches along the continental shelf where convergence and upwelling provide nutrient-rich water. Their feeding grounds then, are often far at sea and may be hundreds of miles from the nesting colonies. The result is that Cassin's Auklet and the Ancient Murrelet — as well as many other sea-birds — have evolved a very delicate life-support system that involves considerable shift-work when their eggs are being incubated and, subsequently, their young are being fed.

Not only do the pairs take turns incubating and feeding the young but they make their change-overs at night, every 24 hours for the Ancient Murrelet and every 72 hours for Cassin's Auklet.

During this time, the foraging bird must not only fly to the feeding grounds and back again but, at the same time, take on enough food to maintain itself during its stay at the next. Add to this the need to take on enough food to sustain the young when they arrive, and you have some idea of the delicate balance between food supply and distance travelled necessary to ensure the bird's survival.

So an oil spill at sea, in the wrong place and at the wrong time, not only could put the birds themselves in a vulnerable position but, before it was diluted by the action of the sea, could temporarily destroy their food supply.

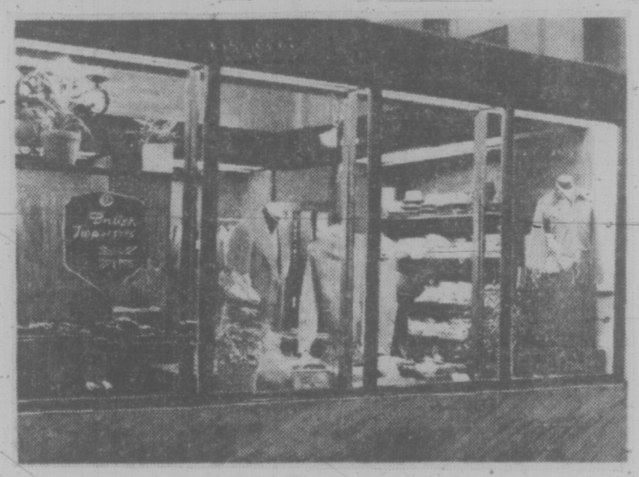
If such a spill was to occur any time between May and August it would not only kill thousands of birds at sea — a patch of oil, one inch in diameter, on a sea-bird's body feathers, is often all it takes — but destroy a season's production of young as well. The surviving adults would be forced to seek an alternative, possibly more-distant and less reliable supply, which would upset the delicate timing that makes successful nesting possible.

Strangely, sea-birds and commercial fishermen find themselves in the same camp on this question. Both use the same nutrient-rich waters, the fishermen doing our carrying for us by transporting the products from those waters to our markets and ultimately to our tables.

So, if you can't make a good case for keeping tankers well off the continental shelf for the benefit of sea-birds, maybe you can make it for people.

New Store Opens

British Importers, having been in business in a downtown location in Victoria for fifty-seven years, has now opened a small but complete clothing store for gentlemen in the lobby of the Empress. James Roberts, owner of British Importers says "Our store appeals to men who prefer classic good taste in their clothing, rather than the 'far out.' We attempt to provide our customers with satisfactory service and elegant clothing—we want to be proud of the way our clientele looks." Mr. Roberts, who has been in the clothing business for many years, selects his goods largely from the United Kingdom, although recently France and Spain have been excellent sources. Fabrics are often imported, he said, and they are styled right here in Canada. "That way we can stay close to the trends and provide the new world look with old country quality," he added. The new store in the Empress is managed by Mrs. Nancy Beamish.



We've Taken a Room at The Empress

British Importers is pleased to announce the opening of a second store in the lobby of the Empress Hotel.

We are happy to become a part of our city's most prestigious hostelry and we welcome you to visit us there.

We feel sure that you will be as happy shopping at our new store as you have been at our Yates Street outlet.

After 57 years . . .
We should know what it's all about.

TAX TIPS: '76

Tax tips are supplied by the Victoria branch of Revenue Canada, 1415 Vancouver Street. Further information may be obtained by contacting that office at 386-2176.

Q. I got separated in 1975. How should I claim my British Columbia Renter's Tax Credit?

A. Where separation of a married couple occurs during the year, and each spouse then maintains a separate residence, each spouse may claim the Renter's Tax Credit. In calculating total rental payments each claimant may include the following:
—rent paid for th part of the year following separation.
—a share of the rent paid prior to separation.

Note: The rent paid for the period prior to separation may be divided in whatever fashion the separated couple decides upon but the combined total of rent claimed must not exceed the actual rent paid upon the shared residence.

Q. What is the new proposal for investment tax credit?

A. Five per cent of the cost of certain new buildings, machinery and equipment, acquired between June 23, 1975 and July 1, 1977 is deductible in full from the first $15,000.00 of Federal Income Tax payable in one year plus one-half of the Federal Tax payable in excess of $15,000.00. The balance may be carried forward five years subject to the same limitations.

Q. On what amount is Capital Cost Allowance calculated if an investment tax credit is calculated?

A. Capital Cost of the property minus the amount of the five (5) per cent investment tax credit.

Q. To whom must a donation be made so that it will be considered a Provincial political contribution for Ontario Tax Credit purposes?

A. The contribution must have been made to a registered provincial political party or to a candidate in an election to the provincial legislature. See the Ontario Tax Credit System form TIC (Ont.) for details.

Q. I have some Canada Savings Bonds. Can I claim the Investment Tax Credit for these?

A. No. The Investment Tax Credit applies only to acquisitions of new buildings, machinery and equipment used for certain business purposes.

Q. Can I claim dental expenses incurred at a denturist's establishment as medical expenses?

A. Yes. The stipulations are that the denturist must be licensed, and the expenses aren't paid for by dental insurance plan.

Q. I received interest and dividend income from several sources in 1975. However, the total amount which was received was less than $1,000. May I claim a deduction equal to the total interest income and dividends included in my income?

A. Possibly. However, interest income from certain specific sources does not qualify for this deduction. Before making any deduction, please review Schedule 4 of your income tax return which should answer any question you may have in connection with eligible or ineligible sources of interest income and the amount of dividends to be used.

Q. Can I now claim all the premiums which I pay for medical insurance?

A. No. You may only claim as a medical expense the premiums which you pay to a non-government medical or hospital insurance plan.

B.C. MPs Rap TV Ruling

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP said Friday that the government and the Canadian Radio-Television Commission CRTC are tying to tell Canadians what television programs to watch.

Allan McKinnon (PC-Victoria) said in the Commons that the CRTC and the government are trying to impose their preferences on an unwilling public through its cable television policy and controversial tax legislation now before the Commons.

The legislation would disallow 100-per-cent tax deductions for Canadian advertisers on U.S. border TV statins and in the Canadian editions of foreign publications.

A group of B.C. Conservative MPs have been arguing for an amendment to the bill which would allow KVOS-TV, a Bellingham, Wash., station beaming into the Vancouver area, to continue soliciting tax-deductible Canadian advertising.

McKinnon said KVOS has developed considerable program expertise which would be lost to Canadians if the bill were passed.

Bob Wenman (PC-Fraser Valley West) said that more than half of all viewers in the B.C. Lower Mainalnd choose to watch American television programs.

The legislation would wipe out this freedom of choice, something which is "unacceptable to any parliamentary democracy," he said.

Crawford Douglas (L-Bruce-Grey) said KVOS and other U.S. border stations want to become Canadian broadcasters without moving to Canada and applying for a CRTC licence.

Douglas a former broadcaster, said the anticipated passage of the bill already has resulted in more advertising for some small Canadian TV stations.

Benno Friesen (PC-Surrey-White Rock) said the bill and the CRTC's policy of forcing cable companies to delete commercials from U.S. stations "would effectively wipe out another television outlet which brings enjoyment and pleasure to thousands of home in the lower mainland of British Columbia."

Rebel Posties Win Injunction

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice John O'Driscoll ruled Friday that the Canadian Union of Postal Employees must reinstate and restore voting rights to members of its Toronto local who crossed picket lines during the postal strike last fall.

He granted Robert Snyder, a shop steward at a Toronto local, and four other plaintiffs the interim injunction.

The order prevents local president, Lou Murphy and three other named defendants, including Joe Davidson, national president, from interfering with the plaintiff's rights to attend Sunday's general meeting of the local.

The injunction, effective until trial or other disposition of the action, also restrains the defendants from interfering with the plaintiff's rights to nominate candidates for office or accept nominations for office.

Mr. Justice O'Driscoll said the defendants cannot interfere with the rights and privileges of membership within the Toronto local.

Snyder said outside the court that the order represents a victory for the dissident members of the local.

The order affects about 500 members, he said.

Operator?

OTTAWA (CP) — Benno Friesen, Progressive Conservative MP, tried to telephone his Surrey-White Rock riding in British Columbia twice recently but instead reached Sydney, Australia.

Friesen, complaining about telephone service in Parliament buildings, asked whether Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve thought it might be cheaper to buy new equipment.

Mrs. Sauve replied that she has the same problem and "you may be sure that I am doing all I can to get these people to get our phones to work."

Mortgage Ceiling Limit Act Planned

QUEBEC (CP) — Major changes are planned in legislation governing ceilings on interest rates and variable interest rate mortgages, says Andre Ouellet, consumer and corporate affairs minister.

Ouellet told a credit managers' convention Friday that the government will introduce a Borrowers and Depositors Protection Act and lift the ceiling on interest rates for certain types of loans.

The minister said the legislation will improve the quantity and quality of credit information available to consumers. Another priority is the creation of a uniform standard of protection for borrowers.

He said it was necessary to amend the Small Loans Act rates are ineffective. In the field of variable interest rate mortages, the government plans rules to protect both lender and borrower.

Air Patrol Funds Short, Goyer Admits

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative Allan McKinnon said Friday the government is having trouble finding the money to finance its purchase of new long-range patrol aircraft for the Canadian Forces.

Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer replied in the Commons that his department as well as the defence department are looking into the problem and suggested that the Victoria MP be patient.

Goyer said Defence Minister James Richardson would make a statement in a few days about the financing talks. Total cost of the contract with Lockheed (an aircraft company) is about $1 billion.

Single Home Syndrome Attacked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rosaire Latendresse of Saint Bruno, Que., new president of the Canadian Home Manufacturers Association, said Friday television and advertising have misled young people into believing the good life means expensive single-family housing.

He said it is little wonder that young people aspiring to join the comfortable middle class will insist on single-family houses. Multi-family housing is never shown except as housing for the underprivileged, such as colored people or young secretaries and clerks.

He said the effect of this is to increase the "urban dormitory syndrome that is so costly to our society and is threatening the balanced growth of Canada's main urban centres."

Latendress said he doesn't think it is the manufacturers' job to sell a new approach to life styles. That job is for the government, the urban affairs department and Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Don Lanskail of Vancouver, president of the Council of Forest Industries that represents the major forestry firms in the province, said British Columbia's forest industry is in danger of losing its share of world markets because of higher costs.

Lanskail said the Soviet Union has five times as much merchantable timber as B.C. and has only begun to develop it. And the Russians are able to deliver lumber into British and northern European ports for about $30 a thousand cubic feet less than can be delivered from B.C. mills.

B.C.'s nearest competitors — in Washington and Oregon — "have an important edge on B.C."—better quality trees, 20 per cent lower wage rates, lower road building costs, more favorable taxation and higher productivity, he said.

He said the forest industry objects strongly to a proposed levy on export profits as a part of the federal anti-inflation program partly because it would further erode the industry's competitive position. The industry, he said, is cyclical, depending on good times to weather bad times.

"Our lumber industry is just now beginning to show signs of coming out of a slump which saw timber production in 1975 drop to its lowest level in almost 10 years. At times, prices dropped to, or below, costs of production."

Carpenters Take Over Archaic Lathers Union

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board ruled Friday that the Lathers' International Union is no longer appropriate for bargaining and the Carpetners Union now will represent the lathers.

A board panel, comprising Ed Peck, vice-chairman, Herbert Fritz and James McAvoy, also suggested that further combining of unions in the building trades might occur "in the light of changing practice and technology and would be in the interests of enlightened labor relations."

The board said that the jurisdiction battle between the Carpenters and the Lathers began after the Second World War when setting and placing of wooden lath was replaced by new processes such as gypsum wall board.

This has led to "disorderly and frustrating conflict, with destructive consequences," the board said.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Ranchers shouldn't expect the Social Credit government to fulfill its election promise of eliminating succession duties, a tax specialist said Friday.

Bill Barclay of Thorne Riddell and Co. in Vancouver, told the 16th annual Stockmen's conference not to expect the duties to be aboished "to quickly in light of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia."

Barclay said everything a rancher does has a tax implication which shows up in income or gift tax and in succession duty.

"Consider tax implications ahead of time, not after a transaction takes place," he said. "And don't do things purely for tax reasons unless it is a wise business move as well."

VANCOUVER (CP) — The operator and four women models of a nude photo studio next door to the Vancouver Stock Exchange were charged Friday with keeping a common bawdy house and being inmates of a bawdy house. Police said customers wee charged $20 for 30-minutes with nude models and alleged that extra immoral services were offered for additional fees. They will appear in court Monday.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A $1.1 million recreation development including a skating rink, four curling sheets and a viewing lounge was officially opened Friday at Logan Lake, about 45 miles southwest of Kamloops, by Pat Jordan, MLA for North Okanagan. It was funded equally by the provincial government, Lornex Mining Corp. and Logan Lake. The 1,500 resident community was originally developed by Lornex.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford has announced plans for building a tax data centre in Surrey.

The centre is one of five to be built across Canada to decentralize income tax processing.

Basford said the centre, schedule to open in 1979, will provide more than 80 permanent jobs for data processing and an estimated 600 jobs in the region it serves.

Another Resignation In Kelowna

KELOWNA (CP) — Alderman Colin Day resigned Friday because the department of municipal affairs had not called a public inquiry into the suspension, and subsequent reinstatement, of city clerk Paul Douville.

The department has said it is still seeking more information on the matter before deciding on an inquiry.

Day also started his campaign for re-election in the April 10 byelection. He said he wants a city manager under contract to take the place of the present system of administration.

DEFENCE WITNESSES DELAY SENTENCE

A 25-year-old man who was to have been sentenced Friday for a drug offence was remanded in county court until next Friday in Nanaimo.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart granted a defence motion for an adjournment to call additional witnesses after the Crown presented three RCMP officers to speak of drug habits and prices.

Thomas Thomson, 76 Dallas, has pleaded guilty to possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking Nov. 7 and 8, 1974, at Cedar, just south of Nanaimo.

Clans Gathering For Scots' Ball

Lively music of the reels, jigs and strathspeys of Scotland and the stirring call of the pipers will highlight the 16th Scottish Country Dance Ball.

The event, arranged by the Royal Scottish Country Dance Society (Victoria branch), will take place at Holyrood House, Feb. 28.

Among the guests expected are a number from distant points and several who attended the first ball, including Miss Flora Crawford, Gerry and Katie Dunn, Mrs. Marjorie Farmer, Mrs. Sylvia Boyko and Archie Mair.

The Victoria branch is the official representative of the RSCDC Edinburgh in this area. The original groups of country dancers founded here in 1960 was given permission in 1972 to form a branch of the RSCDC.

The branch received official sanction in 1973 and since that time has more than doubled its membership.

The Victoria branch has 10 teachers and holds classes from beginning to advanced levels for both adults and children. It also holds teacher training programs and promotes demonstration teams.

HOW MUCH HOT WATER?

One of the items frequently overlooked when remodeling or buying a new home, is the capacity of the hot water heater. First notice of this oversight normally is discovered while under a hot shower when it turns ice-cold prematurely. But, then it is too late. So, here's a short course on the subject.

The capacity of storage water heaters is rated in two ways and is usually imprinted on the nameplate of the tank. One number tells you the capacity of the tank, the other number shows the recovery rate per hour. The sum of the two numbers gives you the number of gallons of hot water a tank can supply in one hour.

A tank of 50 gallons capacity with a recovery rate of 40 gallons will supply 90 gallons an hour which should be plenty for a family of five in a home with two baths and an automatic dish washer and clotheswasher. A family of four without the dishwasher should be able to get by on a 30 or 40 gallon tank with 30 gallon recovery.

Anne Bremer's Qualifications Listed

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Anne Bremer was recommended to fill a teaching post at the primary level in Sooke over all other applicants, the special education supervisor for the district told a human right commission inquiry Friday.

Bill Flemming said he was "bloody . . . cheesed off . . . It was the first time in 10 years I had a recommendation rejected".

Flemming made the comments during the second day of the inquiry into a charge by Mrs. Bremer that she was refused a job by Sooke School District because her husband John was having a legal battle with then premier Dave Barrett.

Those called to give testimony to the inquiry board, headed by chairman Roger Germaine, included Tory Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace, Flemming, Mrs. Bremer and special investigator for the human rights commission Ernie Webster.

Flemming said Mrs. Bremer applied for the job at Glen Lake Elementary school in May and her application "looked like an Eaton's catalogue (it was so thick)". He said he was confident she could meet the qualifications because her work was competent with students at the Pacific Centre for Human Development, before she was laid off.

In June he assessed applicants for the position and "I just submitted Mrs. Bremer's application" to superintendent Percy Pullinger.

After he submitted the application, he said, Pullinger said "something about she's a very forceful lady, needs a bit in her mouth, and I think he told me he would be interviewing her."

Did he indicate any reservations, Bremer's counsel David Lisson asked Flemming.

"He told me he had seen her husband (John) teach and that he was good. He said he had a lot of ham, but he was good. Then we had a little snicker," said Flemming.

"But he (Pullinger) said if a suitable teaching position came up he'd hire him (Bremer)."

Bremer was the B.C. education commissioner fired by the NDP government after Barrett said on television he was a "bit of a flop". Bremer sued for libel and an out-of-court settlement included an apology from Barrett.

The human rights investigator, Webster, said during his study of the case Pullinger had said there were three reasons for his refusal to hire Mrs. Bremer.

Said Webster: "He said she didn't have sufficient classroom experience at the elementary level; that most of her experience was out of the country in Britain and the U.S. and he did not consider her suitable as a school teacher. He was not specific about the unsuitability."

Pullinger's assessment was based on 35 years experience, said Webster, adding the superintendent had expressed "sort of a doubt feeling" about hiring Mrs. Bremer.

Webster said Mrs. Bremer had applied for the Glen Lake teaching post (in May), she was recommended by Flemming to Pullinger, the school board's education committee met to consider the applicant and supported Pullinger's recommendation that she not be hired.

Mrs. Premer testified she had more than 15 years experience including two years from 1973-1975 at Pacific Centre for Human Development, working with children with behavioral problems, planning education policy, therapy and staff training sessions which included primary contact with children.

She is now living and working part-time in Bellingham and has responsibility for a "number of students in a number of classes."

Her husband is working at University of B.C. and as a consultant in Bellingham, she said.

She said Pullinger, in her interview, had mentioned a job opening in the district's Girls Club for teenaged girls with problems — a non-classroom situation — but she had told him her competency was in the classroom.

Flemming said when she first inquired about the job, he checked the salary schedule and her experience would mean a salary around $17,000.

He said he thought she was suited for the Glen Lake "observation class" where students with problems are assessed and special assistance worked out for them.

He thought Mrs. Bremer was not suited for the Girls' Club situation.

Webster said he asked Pullinger if the name Bremer had anything to do with his rejection of Mrs. Bremer's application, and Pullinger responded by saying "so that's why you're still conducting the investigation. He appeared to be surprised."

During earlier testimony Mrs. Bremer said Pullinger had said there might be a problem in hiring her "because there might be some problem with the name."

Tory leader Wallace was called to give evidence about a conversation he had with Mrs. Bremer shortly after she received a rejection letter from Pullinger.

Wallace brought the matter up in the legislature during question period, near the end of the spring session.

Mrs. Bremer had phoned him. She was a member of his constituency, and had a problem, said Wallace.

She felt she had good reason to think "her not getting a certain job, might be related to political involvement that her husband had with the government of the day," said Wallace.

"A short while before the issue of blacklisting certain teachers had been raised in the house, and I connected the matter."

Wallace said he suggested that he raise Mrs. Bremer's case in the House to find out if there was political interference in public areas.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly gave a clear cut denial that her department had anything to do with Mrs. Bremer's rejection, said Wallace.

Then Labor Minister Bill King, also suggested "that if I wasn't just trying to play games on the whole thing I really should take it to the Human Rights commission," said Wallace.

The MLA said he informed Mrs. Bremer of the house proceedings.

"I can't recall my opinion of whether she should or shouldn't take it to the human rights branch," said Wallace.

Louis Lindholm, counsel for the Sooke School Board and Pullinger, asked "Is it true that there is not a scintilla of evidence" to suggest the complaint was founded?

Wallace replied: "There wasn't a scintilla of evidence to suggest Watergate. It's naive to suggest that just because it wasn't written down, there isn't any evidence."

Lindholm asked if Wallace had done any hard investigation into the matter himself. Wallace replied he had made one phone call to a school board official but received "only a non-committal answer.

"If you're suggesting people in that position would give a straight answer . . . it is naive," said Wallace. "Technically no one admitted anything, but what do you expect?"

The inquiry was adjourned to March 24 and 25, after counsel estimated it would take two days to complete evidence and submissions.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The case Friday in Victoria provincial court involved one man; 13 charges, 42 counts and more than $5,190 in goods and services — and, said defence lawyer Robert Monaghan, "it was all to meet his drug habit."

His client, Donald Robert Steele, 23, no fixed address, pleaded guilty Feb. 6 or Friday to all 13 charges from Victoria, Saanich, Courtenay, Campbell River, Vancouver and West Vancouver.

Steele thus admitted responsibility for 37 counts of false pretences, three of possession of stolen papers, and one each of break-in and theft and obtaining lodgings by fraud. Dates on the 42 couts were between Nov. 24, 1975 and Feb. 6.

Monaghan said Steele's drug habit was "mostly speed and some heroin" and said Steele would rather go to a federal prison than a provincial jail, meaning a minimum term of two years which could include narcotic and psychiatric treatment.

Judge F. S. Green had hoped to pronounce sentence Friday but decided to delay it until Monday so he could get a proper grasp of all the charges.

Another matter the judge felt he had to "sort out," was a request presented by prosecutor Scott Marshall for a total of $834 in compensation sought by nine Victoria area companies who were only a few of the victims of Steele's bad cheques.

The total in goods, cash and services obtained by Steele in his 42 offences was $5,190.24 plus three rifles and a set of handcuffs whose value was not given by police. They were stolen Feb. 5 from a Campbell River apartment and recovered when Steele was arrested the next day.

Kenneth Ross Davis, 24, no fixed address, an admitted glue-sniffer "since a very early age," was sentenced by Green to three months in jail followed by a one-year term of probation.

Davis pleaded guilty Tuesday to a Victoria charge of causing a disturbance Monday evening by impeding persons by standing in front of cars at Menzies and Superior. He had been using glue and said his eight previous convictions since 1969 were also due to his sniffing.

Green noted Davis does not feel he has a glue-sniffing problem but ordered "a complete neurological and psychological examination" during the three-month term — "the court can go through the motions of at least setting up the machinery to assist the accused — it can do nothing further."

"The court must express in clear and uncertain terms that this sort of conduct will not be tolerated," Green said in sentencing George Hamilton August 18, of 1300 Yates, to 30 days in jail.

August pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft and Marshall said August was one of three persons who entered a parking lot on Cormorant beside the Elks' club late Feb. 5.

One of the three — not August — used a rock to smash a station wagon's vent window and August took a case of beer from the vehicle.

Webster Daniel Parker, 24, of 1041 Bay pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft and was remanded by Green to March 3 for a pre-sentence report and sentence. Marshall said Parker took two jackhammers and an air grinder worth a total of $2,900 after entering a construction site at Blanshard and Courtenay early Feb.8.

Impaired-driving penalties Friday:

Barry Michael Poole, 28, of 2658 Mt. Stephen, stopped Wednesday in Oak Bay, fined $375 and banned from driving for six months; Edward Alphone Skelly, 32, of 734 Craigflower, stopped Dec. 19 in Esquimalt, fined $300; Gregory Steven Toma, 23, of 949 Patullo, stopped Sunday in Oak Bay, fined $275 and banned from driving for six months. All three pleaded guilty.

Coho Back Monday

The Black Ball ferry Coho resumes its runs between Victoria and Port Angeles Monday after a three-week refit in Seattle.

A company spokesman said today the refit included extension to the ferry's seating area and coffee shop.

Sailings will be daily from Port Angeles at 9 a.m. and from Victoria at 3 p.m.

On March 16 the ferry moves to its summer schedule of two sailings daily, leaving Victoria at 9:30 a.m. and from Victoria at 4 p.m. and departing Port Angeles at 7:30 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Manager Pat Frumento said freight service will now be handled at Victoria by Johnston Terminals Ltd. following sale of that part of the business to an American firm about a year ago.

Alta. Land Tax For Speculators?

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed said this week Alberta land speculators could face still new provincial taxes within the next year or so.

In a wide-ranging interview, Lougheed said he favors a tax on "unearned" real estate profits, provided the new tax is practical and fair and does not interfere with productive investment.

Lougheed said land-use policy is among his top 10 working priorities for 1976 and 1977.

Review of the Alberta land use forum's recent report has been started in the Conservative caucus under a special committee of which Fred Kidd (Banff—Cochrane) is chairman, and the legislature is expected to debate the forum's findings this spring.

The premier said there is an outside possibility of government legislation on forum recommendations this fall, but major moves are more likely in the fall.

A final decision on land speculation taxation will be made this summer, he said, based partially on Ontario's experience with a tax system similar to one suggested by the forum.

Lougheed said Ontario Premier Bill Davis told him last fall a speculation tax works well and the Alberta premier is inclinded to follow suit," if you can develop a tax that's both practical and fair and doesn't dissuade normal investment in job-creating activities."

The land forum said the proposed levy should apply to all land but the premier said Ontario makes exemptions "to assure the tax does not restrict investment in housing."

The land use forum wants the government to take 50 per cent or more of the difference between a property's value in its original use and its selling price for new development.

Finally, a Man Who Can Stop Ali

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. — State trooper Douglas Murphy now can claim a feat even Joe Frazier hasn't accomplished—stopping Muhammad Ali twice.

The trooper was patrolling a section of Interstate 94 and spotted Rolls Royce convertible racing with a Datsun 240B at speeds exceeding 105 miles per hour.

Murphy pulled them over. Driving the Rolls was Ali. In the other car was John Demas, 24, of Chicago.

Ali quietly accepted the summons, then—slowly—resumed his trip.

Murphy said that Demas "stood there babbling" so much Ali never had a chance to say much.

"I stopped him (Ali) for the same thing last September," Murphy said. "I told him once was plenty but twice was time to take action."

Murphy later said Ali had missed his exit during the race, and one of the drivers missed a chance to beat the rap.

"If one had gotten off the freeway, I would have gone after that one," Murphy said. "But both slowed down and stayed on the freeway, making it easy to pull the trick of two for one."

A mailed notice will tell Ali and Demas the amounts of their fines. They can plead guilty and pay the fine by mail or contest the ticket and appear in court.

Maximum penalty for the violation is $100 and 90 days in jail, but Murphy said the judgments probably would not reach the maximum.

Drunk Driver Charged With Murder

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A 68-year-old Montgomery man has been convicted of first-degree murder in connection with a death in a highway accident.

After deliberating for about an hour Friday, a circuit court jury convicted Helfin Lankford of murder in the death of a high-school student in a two-car collision last June.

Lankford was given a mandatory sentence of life in prison and was held without bail pending appeal.

A grand jury said in an indictment that Lankford was drunk or under the influence of drugs when his car crossed the median of a four-lane highway last June 24 and landed on top of another car, killing 16-year-old Randall Holt.

"The juries in Montgomery County and the average citizen are trying to tell us something," said District Attorney Jimmy Evans, who sought the indictment against Lankford in a crackdown on drunken drivers. "Something needs to be done about killer drunks."

Saying that "the punishment fits the crime" in the Lankford case, Evans vowed to seek first-degree murder indictments against any drunken drivers involved in fatal traffic accidents in the county.

Lankford was charged under a seldom-used state law that defines as first-degree murder any act "greatly dangerous to the lives of others and evidencing a depraved mind" without regard to the safety of others.

Since the obscure act was invoked by Evans last year, another four persons involved in fatal accidents in the state have been charged with first-degree murder.

One was convicted of second-degree murder, another of manslaughter and the others are awaiting trial.

They Call It Pioneering and It's Fun

Life is a circle.

And now more than ever there is great fascination in days gone by.

All over North America people are being turned off by the fast-paced materialistic life and are seeking simplicity.

In many areas, city people have gone back to the land; to live in communes or just as a family and work the soil as the early pioneers did. Health stores selling organic foods are doing a roaring trade. And suddenly, it seems, everybody wants to build a log cabin.

Victorians are no different. They have flocked to the Provincial Museum for a chance to work like typical pioneers here in the 1850s.

Labor of Our Hands is a new and exciting program for school, adult and family groups. Funded by a Local Initiatives Project (LIP) grant, it was dreamed up by sponsor Sue Lambeth together with Barbara Avery, Gordon Lough and Bernard LeBlanc who are the instructors.

It runs until May 16 but, says Sue, so great has been the response that all the classes, with the exception of the family-oriented sessions between 2 and 4 p.m. on Sundays, are full.

A course consists of three two-hour classes one week apart and gives those taking part a chance to dabble in such things as helping to build a replica of a Hudson's Bay-style log dwelling, making crude wooden furniture, spinning and quilting and country-style cooking with herbs.

Just what you do dabble in for most of your time depends pretty much on you.

"We're very flexible about it," says Sue. "We try to find out the particular interests of a group or an individual and concentrate on them."

Groups taking part now include the YM-YWCA, Big Brothers and the George Pearkes Clinic.

When I called in on Thursday, Grade 10 girls from Colquitz Junior High School were listening as Barbara Avery explained the making of pioneer-style dresses and Sue Lambeth described early cooking methods. That was in the St. Ann's Pioneer School, built in 1858 and situated next to the museum.

And not far away in the grounds of the old St. Ann's Convent, the Colquitz boys worked on the cabin with Gordon Lough and Bernard LeBlanc.

Bernard is "the mastermind behind the construction," says Gordon, and I watched as he "masterminded" the erection of one wall, aided by Art DeGirolamo and Brent Pottage of Colquitz.

The heavy eight-foot-long blocks of wood, eight inches by six inches, had to be lifted high and slotted in between the end supports. They were fashioned and smoothed with pioneer tools from the museum.

Hanging on the walls of the little work shed near the cabin are strange-looking broad axes, used for squaring, an old-style cross-cut handsaw and a frow for splitting shakes.

Right outside the shed, Steve Southwell sat astride the crude but sturdy little bench he was making and dragged a draw knife across the top to get it level.

Behind him, his Colquitz classmate Steve McCallum pounded a frow with a handmade club as he split shakes for the roof.

And as I bade farewell and wandered off up the road, there was no buzz of a chain saw, no drone of power tools.

There was, instead, just the scraping of a draw knife and the dull thud of a club.

It was all quite tranquil . . . and rather nice.

Budget's Chances Are Shaky

The Greater Victoria school board's $46.8 million operating budget won 11th hour approval Friday but two trustees said today there is a distinct possibility it will be sliced by the province.

Veteran board member Peter Bunn, main opponent when the board failed to approve the budget at a hectic meeting earlier this week, said he thinks the department of education will cut it and he hopes it does.

Board chairman Bill Ross said if the province is going to have trouble mainfaining status quo education budgets this year, "then the chances are good we'll be subject to cutbacks."

Friday's emergency meeting of the board to reconsider the budget saw two of four trustees who voted against it earlier change their minds.

Hal Knight and Daphne Temple added yes votes to produce the necessary two-thirds majority in favor of a bylaw which adds $6.5 million in spending. Bunn and Lavinia Greenwood remained opposed.

Rejection of the bylaw Tuesday had the effect of turning back the entire operating budget.

This year's budget represents a 20 per cent increase over last year and the bylaw was required to approve spending beyond a 10 per cent increase.

Knight said Friday he had made his point earlier and would no longer oppose the budget, which he described as status quo and free of fat. Mrs. Temple did not explain her change of mind but had said earlier she had not realized the full implication of her no vote Tuesday.

Ross said today there has been much publicity about the 20 per cent increase but 17.9 per cent of it is required to meet union contract increases.

It's a status quo budget, he said, with the rest of the increase stemming from underfunding by the board last year.

The 20 per cent increase is still required after allowing for not replacing 32 retiring teachers in June, a move made possible by a declining school population.

Ross said that if the provincial governnment has the money to maintain education spending at last year's level, his board's budget will get by treasury board unscathed.

But Bunn said politicians, even at school trustee level, must look beyond their own spending to consider what's happening in the province and country.

He maintains the budget is inflationary but directs his criticism at union contract settlements. Salaries, wages and fringe benefits account for 84 per cent of the budget.

But he concedes his protest is based on a matter of principle rather than areas of the budget which could be easily slashed.

The province will face the same problem the school board did in cutting the budget because so much of the increase stems from contractual obligations, he said.

His message to union leaders is "this bloody nonsense" of spiralling costs, which benefit no one, has got to stop and there must be a return to stability in the economy.

Rescuers Pass Hat On Ferry

The B.C. Ferries' Queen of Sidney rescued two persons on Friday and passengers and crew passed around the hat to raise $560 for the survivors.

The ferry was on her noon run from Swartz Bay to Tsawwassen when she spotted a fire two miles away off Beaver Point on Salt Spring Island.

Capt. John Callan took the Queen of Sidney to the scene.

The smoke came from the 25-foot sloop Odessy of Mr. and Mrs. R. Majewski of Vancouver.

Odessy was on her way from Canoe Bay Marina to Vancouver when an explosion tore the boat apart and the Majewskis were forced to take to their eight-foot inflatable dinghy.

They escaped unharmed.

"They lived aboard the boat," a B.C. Ferries' spokesman reported. "When the people on the ferry heard this they whipped out the hat and collected $560 for them."

Bus Lanes, Streetcars Studied For Growing Western Sector

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Special lanes for buses are likely and electric streetcars a possibility as Greater Victoria's western community grows, a study on future transportation there says.

The study, prepared for the Capital Regional Board by Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd., consulting engineers and planners, says the best plan for a road network can't be made before a comprehensive regional transportation study.

In the meantime, it suggests priorities for building new roads and extending others and gives a general sketch of how public transit can be tackled.

For now, it says the Thetis Lake interchange with the Trans-Canada Highway remains the key element in transportation planning to link western community and city core, a point which won't come as news to commuters caught there daily in traffic jams.

The western community includes Colwood, Langford, Metchosin and the Highlands and it is the area designated in the official regional plan to absorb much of the region's growth over the next two decades.

The transportation study comes as planners near completion of a community plan for the western sector.

The area has a population of about 25,000 and this is expected to grow to 70,000 by 1996 and ultimately to about 150,000.

Depending on how much of the future population finds work close to home, planners predict rush-hour traffic 20 years from now could hit 15,000 trips an hour, better than three times the current flow.

Most intriguing aspects of the report are probably comments on development of public transportation, a subject where planners are starting just about from square one because there are now only 13 bus trips a day, including three from Sooke.

Unless public transit can offer a positive advantage, such as special lanes kept clear for buses, there's little incentive for people to leave their cars behind, the study says.

But such advantages work. When Lion's Gate bridge, between the north shore and Vancouver, is loaded to capacity, 40 per cent of it is bus traffic because buses are given an advantage.

"If the full demands for transit up to the 70,000 population level are to be met by buses, up to 100 express buses per hour to Victoria could be called upon, which would not impose heavy loads on the highway system as compared to the total flow, but which would be operationally inefficient."

When heavy public transit is funnelled into a particular corridor, as is the case between Victoria and western community, light rail, meaning electric streetcars, may be the answer, the report says.

The existing Canadian National Railway right-of-way make this approach a distinct, if expensive, possibility. A single track system, depending on passing place arrangements, could handle up to 5,000 passengers an hour in one direction.

Current estimates put the cost of a light rail system on an existing right-of-way at $5 million to $10 million a mile to build. Bus systems are considerably cheaper.

The report suggests this list of priorities in staged improvements to the road system:

—substantial improvement to capacity of Thetis Lake exchange, with special attention to priority for buses.

—improvement east of Thetis in corridor to Victoria.

—building a new north-south artery from Sooke Road to Goldstream.

—a new north-south artery from Latoria to Sooke Road.

New Service For Hikers

The national parks branch this summer will establish a resource management area headquarters at Port Renfrew to provide information to people wanting to walk the West Coast trail from that end.

Frank Camp, superintendent of Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, said the staff will include a warden.

The trail improvement program on the 50-mile coast wilderness walkway will be continued, starting around mid-April, he said. This will involve moving the construction crew camp from a site near Nitinat Narrows to an area near Carmanah Lighthouse.

"From there we will work backwards and install a new suspension bridge across the Cheewhat River at Clo-ose," he said. "By the end of next summer about 35 miles of trail will be in tip-top shape."

The entire trail improvement project from Pachena Bay, near Bamfield, to Port Renfrew calls for the construction of 122 bridges and trestles, plus several miles of board walk.

Camp also said the parks branch is working on an interim information brochure on the trail. It will include a map, visitor facilities and trail highlights.

Meanwhile, the parks branch is being deluged with requests from all parts of the United States for information on the trail. One U.S. party plans to start walking it on Feb. 27.

It is estimated about 9,000 day and overnight walkers used the trail in 1975. Many were family groups, mostly from Vancouver Island.

Plots Assured Gardeners

Anyone whose name is on the Greater Victoria allotment gardens waiting list in the next few days can expect to have a plot assigned to him for spring planting.

Garden director Dick Keenpence, of the provincial agriculture department, said Friday there are 133 names on the list now, and that 154 new plots would be added to existing locations for the coming season.

About half of last year's plot-holders have re-registered. Until Feb. 28 these are given priority over new applicants. After that date the remaining plots are allotted in order of applications.

A $10 fee entitles a person without arable land — such as apartment dwellers — to a 1,000-square foot, serviced plot for 12 months.

Mayor Smith . . . pre-boarding privileges

He's 41 and Hurting

"I guess it's the price you pay when you're 41 and insist upon acting like a teenager," Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said this morning.

He was referring to a lively tennis game that ended in a twisted ankle, two torn ligaments and a knee-length cast.

The cast will be on for two weeks and it will be almost a month before full strength will be restored to the leg.

"My doctor says I shouldn't play tennis for at least two months. That's the unkindest cut of all. I love the game and it's the only way I can keep my weight down."

The tennis game was one of his tougher matches. He was playing on a Vancouver court against a Victoria girl, Alex Brown.

"She's an A player. She's good. She's very good."

"She was ahead so I was going all out. She lobbed the ball over my head. I went back to get it — and then it happened. I sort of twisted my ankle."

Despite the injury Smith will leave Wednesday for the Conservative leadership convention in Ottawa.

"It will be difficult to get around but at least I'll get pre-boarding privileges on the plane."

Uplands Residents Join Watch

Oak Bay police said today that contrary to a report in the Times Friday, residents in well-to-do Uplands and Beach Drive are taking part in the Neighborhood Watch program.

A spokesman said several meetings have been held with Uplands' residents who've responded to the crime prevention program "with great enthusiasm."

On Friday the Times reported 17 Oak Bay neighborhoods have organized under the program and involved about 200 residents in scattered parts of the municipality except Uplands and Beach Drive.

Chief Finds Sweep Stub In Safe

A slip of paper worth a quarter-million dollars to Victoria Police Mutual Benefit Association has turned up safe in the chief's safe.

Chief constable John Gregory was out of town when the news came that the ticket — given to police by two grateful James Bay merchants — had been drawn in the Western Lottery.

But association president Sgt. Doug Grant wasn't sure where it had been put for safekeeping.

After returning to the city Thursday night and going to his office Friday, Gregory checked out the safe and came up with the stub.

"He was pretty sure he knew where it was," a member of the department said.

Speaking About Curling, Rowers and the Olympics

Some late-week musings and it's nice to see that an ex-Victorian is in a national curling final. The Vicki Collins (and her North Vancouver rink) who will represent B.C. in the Canadian junior women's curling championship in Thunder Bay, March 14, is the same young miss who was a member of the Racquet Club a few years ago before her father, Duke Collins, received an appointment to the bench and moved back to the Mainland. Miss Collins had a 7-1 record in the round-robin. A Playland rink skipped by Shelly Wilson, tied for second, but lost a playoff to finish third.

Congratulations are due, too, to Don Matheson of the Racquet Club for winning the Island Mixed. Matheson has always been there or thereabouts in several Island playoffs, but never quite able to get that final job done. And this past weekend when he lost his third Lee Jamieson, through an injury — she broke her wrist in a league game — it seemed he was about to be denied again. But he came through strongly at Duncan and his revxamped rink had much to do with that success, Diane Samson moving to lead and Don's wife, Mary, taking over at third. The success was long overdue and all Island curlers will be wishing him well in the provincial.

And with Hilda Dobereiner providing the shocker in the Island women's senior competition by eliminating two-time Canadian champion Flora Martin and then qualifying for the B.C. final, that gives the city 2½ out of three, doesn't it, claiming Vicki Collins as an "ex"? And wouldn't it be fitting if Bob Gallaugher could finally reach his potential in the Pacific Coast Curling Association playdown at Victoria Curling Club and also qualify for the B.C. He's due and capabale, even if the company is rough.

Otherwise on the athletic front, there's the story that rowers are demanding artificial lakes because they feel the forces of nature may give an unfair advantage to one crew, or another, rowing on the wrong side of the lake, as they might do. Balderdash, you say. Perish the thought, kiddies. Not only do the rowers want expensive, hand-made lakes, they want a moving grandstand which can keep pace with the boats from start to finish. Smile, if you wish, but there is such a thing as a moving grandstand for rowing and Russia, which will stage the 1980 Summer Olympics, has it. Want more? That's easy! Because in one of the pre-Olympic skiing races in Europe, when snow flurries affected the first 15 starters — they are the one with the best chances because after that the course becomes rutted — Austria, France, the U.S. and Canada made formal protests that the race be declared "irregular." Switzerland didn't because the Swiss girl had won. This prompted an English official to suggest: "Next they'll be wanting plastic tunnels." Still, it is an exciting sport to watch and obviously in which to participate.

Speaking of the Olympics, there can't be too many legitimate complaints with the television coverage even if the Americans tend to be too parochial at times and if the luge was a little overdone . . . That has to rank as one of the silliest of sports . . . But then I wonder what lugers say about bullfighters? . . . And has anyone happened to catch any of the hockey action on CTV? . . . Bernie Pascal has done an excellent job, and it should have been noted too, that the Russians have changed a bit since their North American visit . . . That was quite an elbow thrown by "No. 17" in the game against West Germany the other night . . . It's a wonder the West Germans didn't walk off the ice, and regroup . . . And if you don't know who "No. 17" is on the Russian hockey team then you're not a hockey fan and it doesn't matter . . . And the vagabond U.S. team so far has done better than all right; and it would be no surprise if the Americans come up with a medal . . . Which should embarrass Canada but probably won't.

When Canada's Toller Cranston lashed out at the Olympic judges for knocking down North American skaters and favoring their own compatriots in comparison, it brought to light the fact that John Curry of Great Britain is of the same mold as Cranston . . . He has not been averse in the past to criticizing the judging . . . When he went to the Olympics this year he trained at Garmisch, rather than Innsbruck, and was under strict orders to talk to nobody about the judging because his remarks in the past have put judges in a mood to disqualify him . . . So what's wrong with telling the officials how good you are? . . . In this humble opinion a lot of figure skating events are pre-judged anyway . . . The up-coming just have to wait their turn, unless they are exceptional, of course. G'nite all.

Vikettes Advance To National Final

By JIM CREAR
Times Staff

Lorna McHattie and Laury Grimston will finish their college basketball careers the same way they began them — going after a national championship.

Both girls were members of University of Victoria Vikettes team that won a Canadian senior women's title five years ago under coach Mike Gallo.

They now are in their final year of eligibility with Vikettes, who Friday night clinched their first-ever Canada West University Athletic Association crown by beating Alberta Pandas 74-61 at McKinnon Gym.

As there is no playoff in the women's league, Vikettes have earned a berth in the national finals for the Canadian Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Union championship at the University of Guelph March 6-8. They'll face representatives from the Great Plains, Ontario, Quebec and Atlantic conferences in the five-team knockout tournament.

Lorna, who counted 13 points Friday night, and Laury will play their final home games tonight at the McKinnon Gym against the Pandas starting at 6:30. They'll be honored in a half-time ceremony in which they will receive presentations from UVic chancellor Bob Wallace.

Friday was a good night all the way around for UVic teams. The Vikings beat Alberta Golden Bears in an entertaining CWUAA men's game, 65-55, breaking a 51-51 tie in the last five minutes by scoring 10 points in a row. They shut out the Bears for nearly 3½ minutes in the process. The Vikings and Bears resume their rivalry at UVic tonight at 8:30.

Earlier Friday, Viking Jayvees beat Columbia Bible Institute of Abbotsford 83-78 with Mickey Welder scoring 33 points for the winners.

Vikettes had a tough time with the Pandas, trailing 45-41 with 13 minutes to go. But Lesley Godfrey ran in three straight baskets and Marg Mainwaring came up with her usual display of sharpshooting to produce the victory.

Miss Mainwaring, who leads the CWUAA in shooting accuracy, scored 22 points and set what coach Gallo Believes is a single-game record by shooting 92 per cent from the floor. She sank 11 of 12 shots, Miss Godfrey, meanwhile, ended up with 18 points.

Vikings remained in a second-place tie with UBC Thunderbirds by beating Alberta. They had to do it without guard Robbie Parris, sidelined with flu, but got an excellent effort from Lorne Dakin, who led both teams in rebounding with 10 grabs while scoring 11 points.

Jim Duddridge led the winners in scoring with 17 points while Lee Edmondson added 15 and hauled in nine rebounds. Bert Zethof added 14 points.

Dave Holland with 11 points and Bain McMillan and Doug Baker with 10 each led the Bears.

In other men's games Friday, UBC dumped Saskatchewan Huskies 99-68 in Saskatoon while Calgary Dinosaurs, who have already clinched first place, ran their record to 16-1 with a 79-70 win over Lethbridge Pronghorns in Lethbridge.

In women's play, UBC Thunderettes downed Saskatchewan Huskiettes 59-43 and Lethbridge defeated Calgary Dinnies 59-54.

Piero Gros Ends Victory Famine

INNSBRUCK (CP) — Piero Gros won Italy's first gold medal of the Winter Olympic Games, capturing the men's slalom in Alpine skiing, and Dutch speed skater Piet Kleine and cross-country skier Ivar Formo of Norway took the gold in their gruelling events today.

There were no more medals for the Canadian team, still savoring Kathy Kreiner's skiing gold 24 hours earlier. Perhaps Nancy Greene expressed the feelings best right after Kathy's win. "It's like a gift. She skied so well."

Gros, who had not won a race in 13 months after taking the World Cup in 1974, produced a brilliant, attacking second run after finishing fifth in the first leg.

The 21-year-old Italian's time of two minutes 3.29 seconds was a half second faster than countryman Gustavo Thoeni, the world slalom champion, who won the silver. Willy Frommelt of Liechtenstein got the bronze, his country's second medal of the Games.

"If I could not have the gold, I can think of no one better than Piero to get it," said Thoeni, also a silver medallist four years ago as well as gold winner in the giant slalom.

Kleine, racing in the eighth pair, won the men's 10,000 metres, last of five events on the men's speed skating program. His time of 14 minutes 50.59 seconds was an Olympic record.

World champion Sten Stensen of Norway, also under the Games record with 14:53.30, took the silver and another Dutchman, Hans Van Helden, got the bronze, timed in 15:02.02.

Formo, a 24-year-old student, finished first in the gruelling 50-kilometre (31.2-mile) cross-country race in two hours 37 minutes 30.05 seconds.

East Germany's Gert-Dietmar Klause, competing in his third Olympics, took the silver medal in 2:38:13.21 and Sweden's Benny Soedergren was a surprise bronze winner, clocking 2:39:39.21.

American Bill Koch, after leading halfway, finished 13th, the highest placing ever by a North American. It was an upset day for the Russians. They placed only one man in the first six, Ivan Garanin, who was fourth.

Fifty-nine skiers from 17 countries started the race, and 44 finished including three members of the Canadian team. Hans Skinstad of Devon, Alta., was in the first half of the field and ended 22nd in 2:46:11.83.

Ed Day of Valemount, B.C., was 37th and Ernie Lennie of Fort Murray, N.W.T., 41st.

In the speed skating marathon over the 6.3-mile course, Kleine was only 28-100ths of a second off the world record of 14:50.3 that Stensen set in Oslo, Norway, last month. Kleine, a 25-year-old carpenter, was the silver winner behind Stensen in the 5,000.

They raced with heavy snow falling, forcing continual cleaning of the oval. "I did not think I could make it," said Kleine.

Thoeni, the 1975 world Cup champion, won the world combined gold medal for his Olympic efforts. He had been 26th in the downhill and fourth in the giant slalom. Thoeni had the lowest penalty points, 24.62.

Frommelt took the world combined silver medal with 48.97 points and Greg Jones of the United States the bronze with 65.84.

Dorothy Hamill of the United States, performing a freestyle program brought her a shower of bouquets from the capacity crowd, won the gold medal for women's figure skating Friday night.

Dianne de Leeuw of The Netherlands took the silver medal and Chrisfine Errath of East Germany won the bronze.

East Germany won the gold medal in the four-man bobsled, completing a sweep of all five gold in bobsledding and luge racing. Switzerland was the silver winner and West Germany took the bronze.

Cougars Call Five Clippers, Perhaps Gus

Jim Gustafson may be back on the ice tonight, but some other regular members of Victoria Cougars will be watching from the sidelines when Flin Flon Bombers invade Memorial Arena.

Gustafson, Victoria's leading scorer who has missed two Western Canada Hockey League games because of a shoulder separation, plans to give it a try tonight.

He is expected to be in uniform with his shoulder protected by football-type pads, but manager-coach Pat Ginnell is not certain if Gustafson will see action.

Ginnell is certain, however, that some of the Cats will not be in action against the Bombers.

Ginnell has called up five players — Kim Hilkewich, Brad Christoff, Terry Graaf, Leroy Heck and Geordie Robertson — from Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior League and that means that some of Pat's boys are not going to make it onto the ice.

Ginnell felt the pinch of his Tuesday night outburst at Memorial Arena when he was fined $100 Friday as a result of a verbal exchange with a linesman at the end of the first period. Ginnell was ejected from the game and New Westminster Bruins went on to defeat the Cats 10-6.

Flin Flon had little success Friday with the Bruins in New Westminster, suffering a 12-4 defeat.

In other games, Saskatoon Blades whipped Brandon Wheat Kings 10-3, Lethbridge Broncos downed Edmonton Oil Kings 7-4 and Winnipeg Clubs drubbed the visiting Calgary Centennials 10-7.

Mike from Minot New Golf Threat

Morley, an obscure struggler from Minot, N.D., is playing so well on this year's professional golf tour even he can't believe it.

"Naturally, I'm a little surprised," Morley said Friday after his eagle on the final hole gave him a six-under-par 66 and a share of the second-round lead in the $180,000 Andy Williams-San Diego open golf tournament.

Morley, tied with J.C. Snead at 11-under-par 133, generally has been overlooked in the early-season heroics of Ben Crenshaw and Johnny Miller, neither of whom is playing here, but his play in comparison with other years has been remarkable.

With the season just getting started, he's finished second once, fourth once and had two other placings in the top 15. He's already won $38,000, compared with $41,000 for all of last season, the best of his seven-year career.

George Knudson of Toronto, the only Canadian in the tournament, shot a 76 and missed the cut with a 147 total.

Carner Fires 65

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — JoAnne Carner, one-putting nine greens for seven birdies and no bogies fired a seven-under-par 65 Friday to take a two-stroke lead in the first round of the $45,000 Orange Blossom event on the Ladies' Professional Golf Association tour.

Sally Little, who has never won on the tour, was second, two strokes in front of four veterans Sandra Haynie and Mary Horner.

Athletics, Burnaby Step Into Semi-Final

VANCOUVER — Burnaby Bullets and Vancouver Athletics will meet in a best-of-three playoff to decide who plays Victoria Scorpions in the B.C. senior "A" men's basketball final.

Bob Wright scored 22 points Thursday as Burnaby thumped North Shore Mountaineers, 80-66, at Winston Churchill School and won the best-of-three quarter-final, 2-1, while Derek Sankey scored 29 points to lead the Athletics to a 72-69 triumph over defending champion Vancouver Capilanos and a 12-1 win in the other quarter-final.

Scorpions, the Dogwood League champions, play the Burnaby-Vancouver winner in a best-of-three series beginning Feb. 20 at Vancouver.

Anxious Official Ruins Good Vault

TORONTO (CP) — Wladyslaw Kozakiewicz of Poland set a world indoor pole vault record Friday night but he had to share the spotlight with a controversy surrounding Canada's Bruce Simpson.

Kozakiewicz jumped 18 feet, 3½ inches on his first attempt at the Toronto Star Maple Leaf Indoor Games. He bettered the old mark of 18-3 set by teammate Tadeusz Slusari last weekend.

However, his feat was overshadowed by a controversial attempt of 18 feet by Simpson, a University of Ottawa student.

With four vaulters left in the event, including former world record holder Dan Ripley of Los Angeles, Simpson apparently cleared the bar at 18 feet on his third attempt.

But an official grabbed Simpson's pole as it fell towards the track where the men's three-mile race was taking place.

The pole appeared to tip the bar and it fell into the pit after Simpson.

Simpson said: "The official, in his exuberance to catch it so it wouldn't hit a runner, hit the standard with it and the bar fell off."

"I was in the pit for three or four seconds before it fell. I feel that the vault should have been allowed. Perhaps not to stand as a Canadian record, but it should have been allowed as an official vault."

Eamonn Coghlan of Ireland won the one-mile event in a time of three minutes, 59.3 seconds, four seconds off the world indoor mark and a second off John Walker's meet record of 3:58.0, set last year. Walker, of New Zealand, did not compete.

Marjorie Bailey of Vancouver won the women's 300 metres, finishing in 39.5 seconds and beating the meet mark of 40.1, set by Poland's Irena Szewinska in 1973. Joyce Yakubowich of Victoria was fourth in 40.7.

Sue Bradley of Toronto and Patty Loverock of Vancouver swept to first-place finishes. Miss Bradley won the women's 50-yard hurdles with a time of 6.6 seconds, while Miss Loverock placed first in the women's 50-yard dash in 5.7 seconds.

Talent Available as Pro League Folds

Money problems have scuttled the National Lacrosse League and Western Lacrosse Association teams today are clearing the decks to welcome aboard a crew of stars returning from the professional circuit.

Commissioner Gerry Patterson announced in Montreal Friday that the NLL will disband prior to the opening of the 1976 season because of "financial uncertainties."

Patterson said the pro loop's board of governors decided to dissolve the league "due to an insufficient number of investors for key United States and Canadian lacrosse franchises."

With 33 players from British Columbia on rosters of its six teams last year, the NLL was scheduled to starts its third season of operation.

Patterson indicated the players would "immediately" regain amateur status through a prior agreement with the Canadian Lacrosse Association.

He announced that Maryland Arrows, Philadelphia Wings and Quebec City Caribous were in solid financial positions, but that Long Island Tomahawks, Boston Bolts and Montreal Quebecois have "encountered financial hardships brought about by a variety of circumstances."

Patterson said one reason for dissolving the league at this time was to permit amateur clubs to prepare rosters for the coming season.

WLA commisioner Ray Burton of Victoria is vacationing in Hawaii and assistant-commisioner Don Sepka explained the WLA position when he said in Vancouver that former pro players would be placed with the last WLA teams they played with before leaving for the NLA.

"I'm sure we'll have more meetings on this situation, but we have discussed the possibility recently," said Sepka, "and feel this is the most equitable way to distribute talent."

Sepka believed there might be some special measures taken to bolster Nanaimo Timbermen, who returned to the league last season after an 11-year absence.

Several NLL players, including Ivan Thompson and Jim Lynch, indicated they would turn out with Victoria Shamrocks.

Thompson, with the Rocks from 1971 to 1974, was an all-star in his first season with Boston Bolts.

Lynch, who went from the junior Victoria McDonalds to the NLL, was rookie-of-the-year in 1974. He was traded to Philadelphia after starting last season with Montreal.

Goalie John Hamilton (Philadelphia), another former McDonald, indicated he is uncertain whether he will continue playing. Ex-Shamrock Ken Alexander (Quebec), expects to continue playing but Chris Hall (Boston) will consider the condition of a troublesome shoulder before deciding if he will return to the Rocks.

Glen Newman (Long Island), a former McDonald, and two ex-Shamrocks with Quebec, Roger Dubyna and Gord Osinchuk, are expected to play with the Timbermen in their home town.

Bob Parry, general manager of Vancouver Burrards, probably echoed the thoughts of most WLA officials when he said Friday in Vancouver:

"There's no doubt the disbanding of the National League will add remendous strength to our league this season."

Oak Bay Bays had some nervous moments Friday night at Dunsmuir before extending their streak of successes against Vancouver Island clubs.

Bays, who have not dropped a decision to an Island squad in almost three seasons, needed a big third-quarter scoring spree to trip the Dunsmuir Demons 73-64 in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

Ranked third in the province, the Bays chalked up a ninth straight victory to retain their unbeaten position on top of the Division "B" standings while the Demons, suffering their first loss of the current campaign, continue to lead the Division "A" list with a 9-1 record.

In other boys' league contests, Vic High Totems were clobbered 80-52 by the Panthers at Parkland and Claremont Spartans trimmed the Rams 64-46 at Mount Douglas.

While the Bays are rolling along with an unblemished mark, Vic High Tigers have completed a triumphant march through the girls' league.

Tigers finished their second successive undefeated season of league play Friday with their 13th victory, a 67-18 conquest of the Panthers at Parkland.

Oak Bay earned the honors in Friday's other girls' game, nipping the Demons 45-41 at Dunsmuir.

Duncan, Maple Ridge Quarters Share Lead

Maple Ridge and Duncan were deadlocked for first place as quartets stepped on the ice at Victoria Curling Club this morning for the final draw in the provincial high school boys' curling championship.

Vic Gamble's Cowichan rink and the Maple Ridge foursome skipped by Greg Monkman each had 5-1 records after the first six draws in the eight-school, round-robin event.

In third place and needing the combination of victory this morning over Maple Ridge and a loss by Duncan in a clash with Kitimat was the Crawford Bay crew skipped by Sandy Graham.

Losing a 10-6 decision to the Brad Juvenille rink of North Vancouver in the third draw played Friday, the Crawford Bay crew had a 4-2 mark.

Earlier, Crawford Bay had downed Revelstoke 7-6 and gained a default win over the Vancouver representatives, who were forced to drop out of two games after two rink members were stricken with flu.

Maple Ridge was the other entry to be awarded a default victory over Vancouver. That came in the sixth draw after Monkman had guided his quartet to triumphs over Quesnel (13-2) and North Vancouver (7-6).

Duncan, which made it 11 straight playoff victories with a 13-4 decision over Vancouver in the fourth round, was tripped 6-5 by Revelstoke although starting the ninth end with a 5-1 lead.

Gamble gave up three on the ninth and Revelstoke skip Henry Okamura scored another two on the last end to snatch a 6-5 victory.

Duncan barely made it back to the victory track in Friday's last draw, squeezing out a 6-5 decision over the Kim Newton foursome from Quesnel.

Friday's results:

FOURTH DRAW
Duncan 13, Vancouver 4.
Crawford Bay 7, Revelstoke 6.
North Vancouver 5, Kitimat 3.
Maple Ridge 13, Quesnel 2.

FIFTH DRAW

ALSO IN CURLING, Phil Dodds' Regina RCMP rink won the Saskatchewan Police title ... Deblonde then nipped Braunstein 918 to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three final ... Larry McGrath of Kindersley was the first skip to claim a berth in Saskatchewan's final ... Les Rogers of Regina and Roger Anholt of Moose Jaw met in todays "B" final and the winner must defeat McGrath twice in order to advance to the national playdowns ... In Alberta, Wayne Sokolosky of Calgary had the only unblemished record after three rounds but rinks skipped by Ken Ursulak of Edmonton, Mel Watchorn of Fairview and Don Longmore of Red Deer were in contention with 2-1 records in the eight-rink showdown ...

When It Mattered, Then Sparkes Flew

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver may yet make it to his eighth Brier as skip of the B.C. representative rink, but two things are certain after Friday night's opening draw in the Pacific Coast Curling Association's eight-rink playoff at the Victoria Curling Club.

One, Sparkes will have to curl better than he did in defeating 29-year-old Craig MacRae of Nanaimo, 6-5.

Two, deep in his heart he knows he should be in "B" side today and not in "A" side.

Because, actually, despite the final result, Sparkes stealing a point in the 12th end for the win, it was the MacRae rink which made most of the shots and deserved to win. Sparkes had a poor night until that 12th end. But then, when the opportunity presented itself, he showed his class.

With the score tied at 5-5, Sparkes kept calling for rocks in front, and getting them. The MacRae foursome, with last rock, kept running them off until the third, Gordie Koster, had a miss on his last rock.

That proved to be fatal.

Sparkes immediately ducked behind the cover with his first stone. MacRae tried to follow Sparkes in but was wide and inches heavy. Sparkes than laid another covering stone and MacRae, trying for a tough double, couldn't make it. Sparkes had escaped.

At the same time all the other rinks were having their problemns with the ice for some inexplicable reason.

And really, the curling wasn't that great, or even good, for this type of competition.

For instance, Vic Wood of the Burnaby Winter Club and the defending PCCA champion, is now in "B" event. So is Bob Gallaugher of Playland, the lone city entry: and Gallaugher would be the first to admit that it wasn't his rink's best night.

Gallaugher lost to a good rink from the Valley Curling Club, skipped by Gary Sigurdson, who might just have been the most consistent of all the skips.

Still, Gallaugher, in his 8-6 loss, had his chance. Off to a bad start and a 3-0 deficit after two ends, Gallaugher managed to get even by the fifth end and even had a 5-4 edge after eight. But Sigurdson responded with two in the ninth, gave up a single in the 10th and then got a big deuce in the 11th to hold an 8-6 lead.

After a couple of misses from the front end of Sigurdson's rink, suddenly it appeared that Gallaugher might come back, at least to tie and possible win.

But just as quickly, that fortune changed. Laying two and with a possible three in the outlook, third Barry Harvey drew through the house to dull that vision. If that wasn't bad enough, and still with a chance to tie, skip Bob Gallaugher did likewise; and that, in addition to Sigurdson's fine play, is why the Playland rink lost.

Wood, in his defeat, ran into a tartar in Tom Campbell of the Valley Curling Club (Cloverdale); and it wasn't until the 12th end that he managed to draw even and force an extra end.

Before then, Campbell, who took over Larry McLaughlin's rink from last year's PCCA playoff, appeared to have control.

The extra end was something else and well played. With the final skip's rocks to come and Campbell lying shot, Wood drew to the button and was partially guarded. Campbell, however, was equal to the task, and, in a remarkable last shot, took out the Wood stone to count three.

Winner of the PCCA final will meet the B.C. Curling Association champion in a best-of-three series for the right to enter the Consols at the Victoria Curling Club, Monday and Tuesday.

Bears Take Second Place From Vikings

EDMONTON (CP) — University of Alberta Golden Bears snapped a deadlock for second place in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's volleyball league by defeating University of Victoria Vikings 3-1 Friday night.

After losing the first game of the best-of-five match 15-4, Alberta rebounded with 15-7, 15-13 and 15-10 victories.

The match concluded Alberta's CWUAA schedule, leaving them with four wins and four losses, while the loss evened Victoria's record at 3-3.

University of British Columbia, which has also finished its schedule is first with an 8-0 record.

Legion Wins Finale

Bob Harris packed the biggest share of the scoring load Friday at Esquimalt Sports Centre as Esquimalt Legion would up its regular-season schedule in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League with a 6-4 victory over Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking.

Legion, which also got goals from Murray Allen, Kerry Brewster and Terry Parsons, opens a best-of-five semi-final playoff next Friday at Esquimalt against Fuller Lake Flyers.

Scoring for the Truckers Friday were Larry Smith, Brad Palmer, Dale Debodt and Brian Lundberg.

Oilers Close In On Playoff Berth

By The Canadian Press

It was "the game of the year" for Edmonton Oilers Friday night as they dropped Toronto Toros 5-3 and moved one step closer to a berth in the World Hockey Association playoffs.

In other WHA action Friday, Calgary Cowboys travelled to Indianapolis to edge the Racers 4-3, while Cincinnati Stingers' downed New England Whalers 5-1 in Hartford.

"It was the game of the year for us," beamed Bill Hunter, Oilers' coach and general manager, after the Edmonton win. "I think we showed we can play playoff hockey because that's what it was tonight."

Hunter had cause for jubilation Friday. The game moved the Oilers 10 points ahead of the fifth-place Toros in the battle for the fourth and final playoff spot in the Canadian division, while the Toros still have four games in hand.

At Indianapolis, Rick Sentes scored the tying goal for the Cowboys at 19:21 of the third period, then poked in the winner at 1:18 of the overtime session.

In Hartford, defenceman Ron Plumb scored a goal on the first shot of the game to spark Cincinnati to the win over New England.

Tide in Driver's Seat

Crimson Tide, Victoria's representative rugby side, must rate as the favorite to capture the McKechnie Cup in a match against University of British Columbia Thunderbirds at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Macdonald Park.

The Tide is unbeaten after two starts in the four-team, round-robin competition with victories over Fraser Valley and Vancouver Reps.

Defending-champion Thunderbirds and Vancouver are winless after two starts.

A Crimson Tide victory would give them the title. If the T-Birds win, it would create a tie for first place.

The Crimson Tide Juniors and UBC Jayvees will play in a preliminary match at 1 p.m.

FULLBACK: Jim Wenman, Oak Bay.
WINGS: Wes Thomas, Cowichan; Chuck Shergold, James Bay Athletic Association.

SCRUM HALF: Daryl Noulette, James Bay Athletic Association.

Flyers Can Do It Without Mr. Shero

By The Canadian Press

Fred Shero had better get back to work before Philadelphia Flyers discover he isn't indispensable after all.

The Philadelphia coach took the night off Friday and the Flyers proved they could win just as well without him when they downed New York Rangers 5-3 in a National Hockey League game.

Shero signed autographs in the press box at Madison Square Garden while his assistants, Barry Ashbee and Mike Nykoluk, ran the team from behind the bench.

"I think every coach should get a break, take one or two days off," explained Shero. 'Even if you're winning, you are under pressure.

"Including pre-season and playoffs, there are 100 games in a season. That's a lot of games, and there's plenty of pressure for a coach to handle.

"I'd like to see Mike and Barry get more credit. They do as much—or more—than I do, and I get all the credit, which isn't fair. I don't consider them assistant coaches, I consider them co-coaches."

In Friday's other NHL games, Buffalo Sabres edged Atlanta Flames 3-2, Boston Bruins edged California Golden Seals 6-5 and St. Louis Blues blanked Washington Capitals 2-0.

Philadelphia has won the last two Stanley Cups with Shero in command and has a comfortable lead in the Patrick Division standings.

A check with the NHL office disclosed the Flyers became the first team ever to have two coaches behind the bench.

Reggie Leach and Bill Barber scored two goals each for the Flyers, with Barber bringing his league-leading total to 39 goals.

Jacques Richard, who came to the Sabres from Atlanta in an off-season trade, capped a third-period comeback that enabled Buffalo to keep pace with the first-place Bruins in the Adams Division race.

"I was in front of the net," said a happy Richard. "It was close to the goalie (Dan Bouchard), and I put the puck between his legs."

Boston's Wayne Cashman scored his second goal of the game to break a 5-5 tie at Oakland. Doug Gibson also had a pair of goals for the Bruins, who maintained their six-point lead over Buffalo.

Chuck Lefley scored his 32nd and 33rd goals of the season for St. Louis and goalie Ed Johnston blocked 18 shots to earn his first shutout of the season.

Yukon Towns Seeking Legal TV

OTTAWA (CP) — A new round of negotiations will begin next week in Whitehorse to determine whether the people of Teslin and other small Yukon communities will be able legally to watch television directly from the Anik communications satellites.

Officials of Telesat Canada, the government-private industry consortium that operates the three Anik satellites and a system of ground receiving stations, will confer with Yukon government authorities on proposals for licensing of ground stations for Yukon communities, a Telesat official said today.

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission, the federal broadcasting licensing body, Thursday granted a community group in Teslin, 114 miles southeast of Whitehorse, permission to run a low-power rebroadcasting station to bring television to the town of 350.

The Teslin group has been operating a television service for several weeks without federal licences using a $40,000 earth receiving station which was 90 per cent financed by the Yukon government.

The CRTC licence allows the community to operate the rebroadcasting station. No licence has yet been granted for the earth receiving station, a dishlike structure which picks up signals from the Anik satellite.

Telesat has objected to the Teslin operation because the company does not own the earth station. Telesat has offered to lease its own equipment to the town for about $14,000 a year.

An official said the negotiations will settle the question of whether Telesat or Yukon government-owned equipment will be used. The Yukon government wants to establish similar earth receiving and rebroadcasting outlets in seven other communities without television service. One objection to the Teslin ground station is that it is tuned to receive Canadian Broadcasting Corp. network signals from one Anik channel. This channel is sometimes used only as a back-up for technical messages and other non-broadcast communications during important events.

School, Hospital Row Faces Quebec

Times Quebec Bureau
By RICHARD DAIGNAULT Jr.

QUEBEC — After admitting that an ultimatum issued last month to a common front of teachers and hospital workers has failed, the Quebec government fears that hospital labor disruptions and the growing number of work stoppages in the province's schools is paving the way to a major confrontation.

The province's public service minister, Oswald Parent, had threatened to break off negotiations within 48 hours if the unions continued their pressure tactics. The ultimatum was rejected by the unions, which then intensified these tactics.

The situation has led Parent to say that "we have reached a stage where there is an escalation of walkouts on one side and lockouts on the other in certain parts of the province. And if this is the direction talks are taking, I believe we are heading for a real clash."

Until recently it was difficult to gauge what line of action the government would take in negotiations with the 260,000 government-paid employees.

Some members of the Bourassa government appeared to favor a flexible approach. They believed the government should avoid useless clashes between employees and government negotiators.

Others shared the hard-line approach. Their strategy would go as far as the possibility of closing the province's schools and hospitals, pitting the people against teachers and hospital workers.

In 1972, similar events took place in schools and hospitals across the province prior to a general strike of a common front of government employees.

It ended with the jailing of three Quebec labor leaders who had defied back-to-work court orders.

The question is whether the government is expecting a crisis similar to the one experienced in 1972.

The nomination of former immigration minister Jean Bienvenue to the education portfolio, and Parent's threats to break off negotiations, gives the impression the government hasn't ruled out the hard-line approach this time.

Bienvenue is a man with a tough, law-and-order image, and has a proven ability for political scrapping.

And militant teachers in Quebec are not too happy with his appointment as the fourth education minister in six months.

Bienvenue is a "bigoted, arrogant country clod . . . an arrogant reactionary who has never had the slightest interest in education," said Donald Peacock of the Montreal Teachers' Association after the appointment.

Bienvenue, a former Crown prosecutor is cool and low-key in the Quebec national assembly.

But he has gained a reputation as the man who can do the "dirty work" for the Liberals.

Parent's nomination as public service minister in the summer of 1974 surely did not appear as provocation, although the Hull MNA does have a tougher image than other Bourassa cabinet ministers.

Yet Parent's style of negotiating appeared quite flexible in the beginning.

Parent, in the early stages of the talks, went out of his way to express confidence that he would reach a negotiated settlement with all employees before the new year.

The minister appeared calm and prudent in his statements, and gave the impression he didn't want to upset the good climate of negotiations.

He even went through a chest thumping session in the national assembly last fall when a settlement was reached with some 33,000 government public service employees, who aren't members of the common front.

But Parent's sober tone underwent a sudden change when, unexpectedly he threatened to break off the negotiations if pressure tactics didn't stop.

The ultimatum didn't appear to be designed to put a stop to the wave of pressure tactics, but rather to get tempers boiling among disgruntled rank-and-file members of the unions involved.

Most of the education sector employees gained the right to strike this week. In the hospitals, employees aren't allowed to strike until it is determined what essential services must be provided in case of a strike. About 50 per cent of hospitals have reached an agreement on essential services and the remaninder are expected to do so by early March.

Although Parent maintains that the ultimatum was not aimed at an escalation of the pressure tactics, it does appear as though the government isn't planning on putting a stop to them.

Coffins Sold Newlyweds

DORTMUND, West Germany (UPI) — Newlyweds in this Ruhr city are asked to think about coffins along with wedding rings.

At the Registry Office after the obligatory civil ceremony, the bride and groom are given a leaflet entitled "questions on death that you can settle leisurely while living" which outlines modern burial techniques and procedures to be followed in case of death.

"It is better to think about such things today rather than tomorrow," the leaflet says. "In this way the wishes of the deceased can be respected."

Aussies Prepare For Prawn War

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Fears of a bitter "prawn war" involving Australia, the Soviet Union and Taiwan, among others, are worrying officials here.

"It could make Britain's cod war with Iceland look like a storm in a teacup," said one fishery official in the state of Queensland. "The situation will be explosive to say the least."

The battleground is the huge Gulf of Carpentaria, which stretches 400 miles between Queensland's Cape York Peninsula and the Northern Territory. At stake is a prawn harvest valued at about $25 million.

Most of the gulf, one of the world's richest prawning grounds, is outside Australia's 12-mile limit in international waters.

But tough Australian trawlermen consider the gulf their territory.

They resent the intrusion of foreign fishermen—Soviet and Taiwanese among others—who also head for the gulf and its rich harvest each year.

Most of the catch ends up being frozen and exported to the United States and a good trawler skipper can earn anything from $50,000 upwards during the three-to four-month season. Crew members can earn up to about $20,000, so the competition gets fierce when a swarm of prawns is sighted.

Since the vast prawning grounds were discovered in the mid-1960s, hardly a season has gone by without at least one ugly incident.

Although government officials say reports are hard to check because of the remoteness of the gulf and the bond between the Australian fishermen, it is certain that shooting incidents have become more frequent.

Trawlers return to the tiny port of Karumba, the centre of the gulf's prawning industry, with the occasional bullet hole.

Incidents have continued with increasing intensity, although there have been no reports of serious injury.

"There have been stories of Australian fishing vessels chasing foreign vessels out of Australian waters, ramming foreign vessels at sea and shooting indiscriminately at foreign fishing crews," said Norman Hall, director of Queensland's state fisheries department.

"The question now is how far it will go before the other side retaliates.

"We don't want a fishing war in the gulf—but the situation is there and it's very real."

Ancient palaces, modern elegance—and bargain feasts

Peking combines old and new

China's capital city a fascinating blend

By ALBERT M. MYERS

PEKING, China (CNS) — Peking, the capital of the People's Republic of China, is the country's political, economic and cultural centre. It is a beautiful and clean city . . . a mixture of the old and new.

Many dynasties of past emperors are represented in Peking in such places as the Palace Museum, the Forbidden City, the Summer Palace, Peichai Park, the Great Wall of China, the Ming Tombs and others. These stand as eloquent testimony to the fine, unique style of China's traditional architecture.

The new Peking hotel is an example of one of the most elegantly designed hotels in the world.

It has great simplicity, yet its marble and its beautiful appointments are a mark of the modern Chinese. Of course, one carries his own bags, and there is no tipping for other services.

The restaurants of Peking were excellent. A highlight of our visit to Peking was a visit to a restaurant specializing in Peking duck. One must call for a reservation one day in advance, as the preparation of this exclusive dish takes a great deal of time.

Roast Peking duck is the main course, and is served with brown sauce, flat cakes and miniature scallions. The duck is washed in sweet water and baked for 35 minutes in an open-hearth oven with date tree wood which produces no smoke.

The duck has been forced-fed for 60 days. It is truly a delicacy, and the skin is considered the best part.

While the Peking duck is the main course, there are cold dishes of shrimp, duck tongue, tomatoes, cucumbers, duck soup, duck eggs, baked duck slices, duck liver, fish, bamboo shoots, beans and a dessert of caramel apples served hot and dipped in cool water.

There was brandy, wine and beer. The bill for this gourmet delight was $5 per person.

The Temple of Heaven complex in Peking, covering 250 acres and known as the Forbidden City, is a good example of Mao's doctrine: "Let the old serve the new." Masses of people stroll through areas where once only emperors and their entourages were allowed.

It was named the Forbidden City because entrance was forbidden to all except the emperor, his concubines, eunuchs, guards, officials, palace staff and craftsmen.

All the roofs in the Forbidden City are a gorgeous yellow tile. There are three great halls: the Hall of Supreme Harmony, the Hall of Perfect Harmony and the Hall of Preservation of Harmony. Each has its own huge courtyard where many events took place.

Beautiful paintings hang there and much of the art of China was created within the walls of the Forbidden City. The gardens of the city had many marble carvings. One can walk an entire day and only partially cover the area.

The Forbidden City sits immediately across from Tienan-Men Square, which translated means "Gate of Heavenly Peace." This 98-acre square is the ceremonial centre of Peking where hundreds of thousands of Chinese have massed to hear their leaders.

On each side are two enormous buildings — the Museum of History and the Revolution, and the Great Hall of the People.

One of the most picturesque and beautiful areas in Peking is the Summer Palace which is situated on the Kunlo Lake. Compared to the rigid, geometric design of the Forbidden City, the Summer Palace is rambling and spread out.

As we walked through the palace fabulous treasures of silk, jade, garnet, amethyst, lapis, turquoise, wood carvings, paintings and many other works of art were everywhere.

The Summer Palace is a series of buildings with over 9,000 rooms overlooking a beautiful lake where the Chinese go boating on Sundays and holidays.

In the center of the complex is a long, hand-painted corridor, which is said to be so long that a young couple could meet at one end and by the time they reached the other end could become engaged for marriage.

The greatest experience for any visitor to Peking is a trip to the Great Wall of China.

It is truly a miracle of engineering and extends for 2,500 miles. It averages 24 feet high, 21 feet in thickness at the base and 18 feet at the top. It really blended in with the mountains and today is a favorite spot for Chinese families to spend their days.

This bridge at Peking's Summer Palace is typical of cultural treasures to be found in the Chinese capital. Graceful structure is made of wood, marble and tile.

They spoil you for $18 a day for two

GALWAY, Ireland

"When you're pulling a pint of Guinness, you must handle it like melted gold," said Phyllis. "Give the handle a pull toward you. And in a second away from you. It gives stout a fine head and a rich creamy body.

"The customer will be quick to let you know if it's not right. 'Ah, ye've done a turrible thing to me girl. Ye've pulled me a bad pint.'"

Phyllis is the barmaid at Cashel House. The best of 300 farm houses that take in guests in Ireland. We couldn't find it on a map, but they gave us directions in Galway:

"Past the grey ruined wall where Judge Lynch hanged his own son for the murder of a Spanish sailor. For no one else would lay hand to the rope . . ." Ask directions in Ireland and a story goes with it.

If you ask in Dublin for Cashel, you'll be told: "Ah, now that's in Tipperary." So you must go to Galway where they'll put you on the right road.

Seven years ago, General and Madame de Gaulle came to Ireland on holiday. After trying several places, they hit on Cashel House. It's a two-storey white Georgian building with rooms for 18 couples.

Rooms have fresh flowers each day. Dinner on arrival was egg in a spicy curry sauce. Fresh poached salmon. Raspberry cobbler with cream so thick we had to spoon it from the jar.

Hot coffee arrives with the wake up call. The maid says: "Have your breakfast in your room now, overlooking the garden for it's a lovely day."

All this for about $18 a day for two including breakfast. And you can write to Cashel House, Cashel Bay, County Galway, Ireland, and ask for more information.

Take a rent car with you for this is wild Connemara country of castle ruins and purple heather. Atlantic storms that beat on the rocky coast.

Ask Irishman like this for directions and inevitably a story goes with it.

Cashel House puts up a picnic basket for you every day.

Take the coast road coming back and you'll come to the village of Spiddal. Standun's is like a country store, with knitted wool all over the place.

Huge piles of sweaters are haystacked with no clue to size. Keep pulling at the stack until you find one that fits. Standun's has more than 100 farmers' wives whose knitting needles go clickety-clack in the evenings as they watch the telly soap opera, The Riordans.

"Could we get a good camera buy in duty-free airport shops in the Pacific?"

I think you'll do better in towns. Such as all duty-free Hong Kong and Fiji. Or shops in Tokyo that are permitted to sell to you duty-free. Airport shops pay high for the concession. They BUY duty-free, but they pass the rental on to you.

Costs rise and airports get greedier each year. Tokyo airport is no bargain. Hong Kong airport shop is much higher than in town.

"My aunt and a friend are going to Europe this summer on their own. Should they take a tour instead? It seems safer to me."

You could have your aunt pack. Then take the suitcase and have her carry it all around the outside aisles of a supermarket. Because somewhere, some time, she's going to haul that baggage herself.

Example: European porters will put your bag in the overhead rack. But they will NOT come on the train to take it down. YOU wrestle it down and hand it to them through the train window. Sure, there's a way to check it in the baggage car. Can she say it in Spanish? French? Italian?

I don't like the tour regimentation. ("Bags outside your door at 8 a.m.") But with the skidding dollar and European inflation, it's MUCH cheaper. And there's no hassle about getting to airports, taxis and so on.

People complaining plenty about Italy. Constant strikes. Mail — forget it. Letters take two or three months. In or out.

Motorcycle bandits cruise the streets watching for women who carry bags slung from the shoulder. They slide up alongside. Snatch the bag from the shoulder. Pour on the coal and out of sight. Moral: Don't walk near the curb.

Iceland offers friendliness and strange, stark loveliness

By HELEN HOPE COLGAN

It's called Iceland, but don't let the name fool you. Tropical it isn't, and it does have the largest glacier in Europe, but Iceland has a lot to offer the visitor besides ice.

The water is drinkable, the air breathable. The scenery is spectacular and uncrowded.

Iceland has the fjords of Norway, the greenness of Ireland, the geysers and hot springs of Yellowstone, more black lava sand than Hawaii, plus the midnight sun (or northern lights) of Alaska.

It has a strange starkness and to-the-horizon views because few trees grow there and almost none over 30 feet tall.

But everywhere there are waterfalls, large and small, roaring through rocky gorges, tumbling over basalt cliffs, disappearing into the rocks, and appearing again.

Add to all this the fact that the people are friendly and many, especially in the Reykjavik area, speak English fluently, and you can see why Iceland makes a good destination or stop-over en route to Europe. (Icelandic Airlines still offers the lowest air fares to Europe.)

Reykjavik has a number of fine hotels — the Loftleidir, the Saga, and the Esja among others, and there are accommodations in most of the larger towns.

In the outlying areas the boarding schools are turned into hotels in the summer which, incidentally, is the best time of year to visit Iceland.

Inflation, as elsewhere in Europe, has hit Iceland. Hotel rooms are expensive since all building materials must be imported.

Iceland is subject to frequent minor earthquakes — cracks; plastered and replastered, can be seen in many buildings — so building regulations are strict, further increasing costs. But guest houses, hotels, and rooms in private homes can be obtained for less. Or you can camp out.

A fascinating array of tours is offered from a half day of sightseeing in Reykjavik to three- and four-week guided camping tours of the rugged, uninhabited interior highlands.

You can be as adventuresome or as pampered as you please.

You can take a one-day flight to the Westmann Islands and see how Heimaey is rebuilding after the destructive 1973 volcanic eruptions.

You can fly across the Arctic Circle to Grimsey and get a certificate from the pilot to prove it to your friends.

Or you can sample the restaurants in Reykjavik — July is fresh salmon season — and attend the English Theatre at the Loftleidir. Remember that food is expensive here, for in the main it, too, must be imported.

We rented a car and drove around Iceland. If this is your choice, make reservations in advance — you'll need them.

The roads outside of Reykjavik and the larger towns are single lane dirt, but are well maintained and frequently graded. Outside of a few small washouts on the south coast, we found them quite driveable. Gas cost us about $1.50 a gallon.

This method of travel can be combined with camping, thus helping you cut down on the cost of hotels.

There are few campgrounds as such, but you are free to pull off the road and camp wherever you choose as long as the land is not privately owned. And you can be easily assured of getting away from just about everything.

What you may not get away from in camping is rain. Most of the rain we experienced, however, was a a light, if steady, drizzle. It also was frequently windy in Iceland. The warmest, sunniest part of the island in the summer is the north part.

You can get more information about this intriguing island by calling Icelandic Airlines toll free number, 800-223-5500, or by writing the Icelandic National Tourist Bureau, 505 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10020.

Little shops fascinating

London hides a sea of fascinating little shops, each with its own speciality, and when you discover the few mentioned here you will find others in the same streets, or around the next corner — London is like that.

It is in these backwaters that a mint of exciting merchandise is to be found.

Tucked away in Soho is Anything Left Handed Ltd., 65 Beak Street. With its door made to be opened by the left hand, southpaws — or sinistrals, as they are termed technically — enter a treasure trove of utensils and equipment specially made for them.

The House of Floris, Chocolatiers, Patissiers, Caterers and Wedding Cakes at 39 Brewer Street, Soho, sell the most delectable confectionery and cakes. The first Monsieur and Madame Floris came from Budapest about 40 years ago, and began the little shop that grew to world fame with royal warrants to its credit. Sir Winston Churchill always had his birthday cake made here.

Another place to make your mouth water if Prestat, 24 South Molton Street, W.1. It was founded in 1908 by a Frenchman, and chocolates and truffles are still made on the premises according to original Napoleonic recipes, and a tantalizing aroma wafts up from the basement kitchen.

The Button Queen, 23 St Christopher's Place, W.1., houses a unique collection of antique buttons which can be made into cufflinks and necklaces. The stock also includes rare and original hand-painted enamel miniatures and old buckles.

Since 1730, Floris Perfumers (not to be confused with Floris Patissiers) at 89 Jermyn Street, S.W.1., have concocted delicious perfumes and bath oils in English flower fragrances: Red Rose, Honeysuckle, Gardenia, Rose Geranium, Violet, Jasmine. Even the New Mown Hay, Verbena and Lime for men are exactly what one would expect from this traditional fifth-generation family business.

Doors can be adorned at Knobs and Knockers, 65 Judd Street, W.C.1.; and lamps to hang inside or out are at Lamps of London, 48 Walton Street, S.W.3. Their large selection includes modern and antique or, if you prefer, they will make one to your own design.

For a special gift Hang the Expense, 197a Brompton Road, S.W.3. The attractive display incides a good range under $10, and among children's gifts downstairs are pictorial excerpts from Beatrix Potter stories.

Ann Parker, Dolls, 109 Esmond Road, W.4., makes dolls in historically accurate period costume, cut and sewn by hand. Miss Parker is known as the Madame Tussaud of miniatures, and her dolls' faces are hand-cast in biscuit porcelain from her own carvings, based on authentic portraits. Each a work of art, prices are from $50.

For the high fashion look, Emeline is one of the best jewelery 'boutiques' in London with half of the stock from Paris and the rest from around the world. Purchases are beautifully packaged in purple boxes and purple suede pochettes.

Home-lovers enjoy The Craftsmen Potters Shop, on the site of William Blake's birthplace in Marshall Street, W.1. It stocks the best selection of craft pottery in the country as judged by the Craftsmen Potters Guild of Britain. A range both practical and decorative, each piece is signed by the potter and if you like one style but want a different size, they'll do it at no extra cost.

Revered museums focus for tourists

12th century towns spectacular

By ELIZABETH POND

VLADIMIR, Russia — Museums are revered in the Soviet Union, and they are the central focus for tourist trips. For instance, the highlight of an Intourist visit to the magnificent 12th-century towns of Vladimir and Suzdal comes in their Golden Gates and Nativity Cathedral museums.

One drives the 180 kilometres from Moscow to Vladimir through yellow birch woods and villages with fretworked wooden houses, goats, and stakes of kindling.

Many villagers are harvesting potatoes in the fields, but a few are repairing roofs against the winter, and others are gathering mushrooms in the autumn woods.

The visitor enters Vladimir via the once-spectacular Golden Gates — and it is inside these gates that he finds the town museum.

This is the only ancient interior he will visit. The Dormition Cathedral with its many onion domes and gentle faced frescoes is the model for the later Church of the Assumption in the Moscow Kremlin — is closed for restoration work. So is the St. Dmitri Chapel with its basreliefs.

The Nikolo-Kremlin Cathedral has been turned into a planetarium, and the visitor is taken neither there nor to the monastery where Alexander Nevsky was originally buried. The latter site now is the local security police headquarters.

In the museum a diorama shows the 13th-century assault of the Tartars as red lights glow and an English-language recording recounts the traumatic defeat.

The model figures of defenders shoot arrows at the invading hordes, but the human wave of attackers has already mounted scaling ladders and breached the burnt wall.

The Tartars' stone-hurling catapult is still for the moment, but the invaders are preparing a battering ram for the main gate.

The Russians fought valiantly, the recording says, and did not surrender. But as the various Russian principalities were not united, Vladimir was quickly overcome, and the town was razed.

The heart of Russia moved from Vladimir to Moscow.

Vladimir never regained its ascendancy, even after liberation from the Tartars in the 15th century.

After the diorama, in chronological order, come portraits of Gen. Pyotr Bagration of War of 1812 fame, and Gen. N. G. Stovetov, identified as a 19th-century Vladimir general who fought with the Bulgarians against the Turks. A mountain is named after him in Bulgaria.

Next comes the extensive portrait gallery of Second World War heroes from the Vladimir region. Vladimir, which is northeast of Moscow, was not besieged by the Nazis as were the capital, Leningrad, and Stalingrad. But Vladimir soldiers fought at Stalingrad, and a major weapons designer came from here.

So, too, did that more recent Soviet hero, cosmonaut Valerie Kubasov, the Soviet engineer in last year's American Soviet space rendezvous. He is represented in the museum by the gym suit and shoes he wore on his first space flight.

In nearby Suzdal, another of the great medieval Russian fortified towns, the visitor is taken inside two old churches — the 12th-century Cathedral of the Nativity with its early copperwork doors and the church inside the Saviour Efremiev Monastery.

Here too, however, the tourist guides linger longest at the museum located on the grounds of the Nativity church. Inside the museum there are scenes from the Chronicles describing the Tartar invasion.

There also are artifacts from the 10,000-strong Intercession Convent, where czars exiled unfortunate wives. Regional lacquerware and a room of icons complete the museum tour.

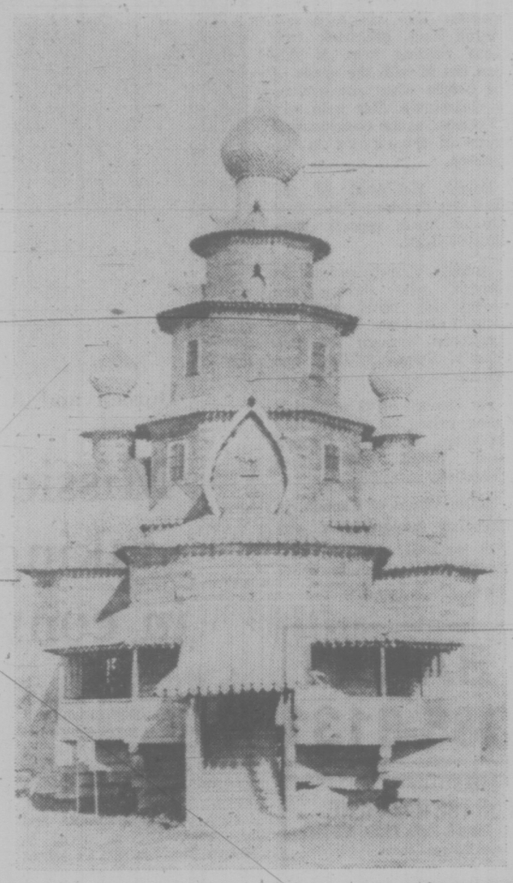
Soviet Union's treasures highlights for vistors



This 18th century north Russian church was originally built without the use of a single nail. However, nails were used when the church was reconstructed in Suzdal.

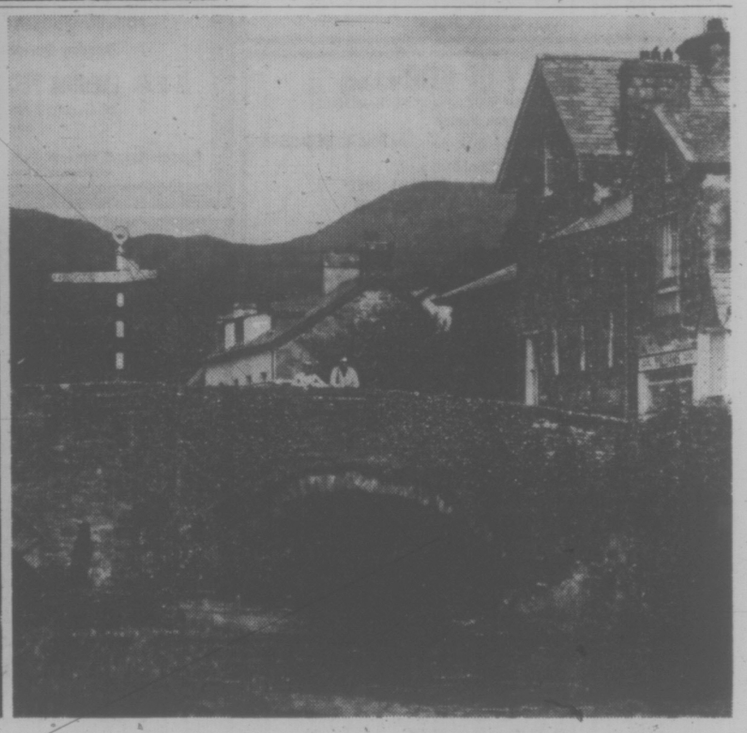
THE HARRISON
Harrison Hot Springs, British Columbia



Britain
Take an independent trip through Britain, and follow the signposts you can't resist.

When you're footloose and fancy-free in Britain, you can travel at your own pace and meet your own budget. Rent a car (or even a bike) and try the local accommodation. It's good, inexpensive, easy to find, and friendly. And in Spring air fares are low and the countryside at its freshest and loveliest.

When you rent a car for your holiday in Britain, you're renting freedom. Freedom to visit Mousehole, Beer, Loose, Much Wenlock, Betws-y-coed, Tongue, or even Paradise. And freedom to travel at your own price: remember most British cars average twice the miles per gallon of North American cars.

And where do you stay?

At inns and hotels built to suit every taste and every budget. Or stay in "bed and breakfasts": private homes where the owners will rent you a bedroom for the night, and wave you off in the morning after a hearty British breakfast. All for less than $8 per person.

If you like, you can rent a trailer or motorhome (from about $100 per week), and stay at up-to-date campsites throughout Britain.

Where do you eat?

Breakfast is usually part of your overnight accommodation in Britain. But for lunch, what better than good British ale and hot cottage pie at a country pub? Or you can picnic. The British love picnics, and most hotels will pack you an inexpensive lunch when you leave in the morning.

And you can dine in restaurants that number among the country's finest. Outside the big cities you'll seldom pay more than $25 for dinner for two with wine. Or you can seek out local inns where the menu is fixed and so is the price: about $15 for two.

Where should you go?

Wherever fancy takes you. South to Land's End across the lonely moors and along the craggy coasts of Cornwall and Devon.

West through the scattered villages of mid Wales to the magnificence of Snowdonia where the mountains are invitations up to unbeatable views.

Or north to the Lake District, Northumbria, and the Scottish Highlands.

And on the way you could take time off for sailing, canal-boating, or pony-trekking.

Take your independent trip through Britain this year: soon, while Spring's in bloom.

Note: All prices quoted are approximate and based on an exchange rate of $2.00 to the pound.

Quake aid swelling

Greater Victorians are responding generously to appeals for help for earthquake victims in Guatemala.

In four days this week the Red Cross at 1046 Fort has received nearly $7,000.

"The response has been wonderful," said Mrs. Eileen Medley, executive director of the Victoria branch. "It seems we've done nothing but write receipts all day but that's fine."

Earlier this week, Victoria Mayor Michael Young urged residents to give generously to the Red Cross to help the earthquake victims.

The provincial government has made grants totalling $25,000 through its agricultural aid and world disaster assistance fund. Of this amount, $15,000 has gone to the Canadian Red Cross and $10,000 to C.A.R.E. of Canada.

A Victoria registered nurse, Dianne Bates, has offered her services in Guatemala. She is being sponsored by the Greater Victoria Council of Churches and the Society of Friends (Quakers).

The Kiwanis Club, through its spiritual aims committee, has donated $1,000 to the Quakers and this will be earmarked for Miss Bates' project.

She told a meeting of the council of churches this week that she is a hiker and speaks Spanish. She will take her badroll and backpack into areas needing help, if this plan fits in with the needs of the people when she arrives in Guatemala. Her help will be related to the co-ordinating group of Quakers in the country.

Peggy McDonald of the Save the Children Fund, 3944 Lauder Road, reports donations of $1,232.

Among church groups in Canada who have given money for relief are the Roman Catholics, $35,000, the Anglicans through the Primate's Fund, $25,000, and others.

An amount of $1 million is being raised as a gift from Canadian churches through the World Council of Churches.

World Vision of Canada, is Christian humanitarian service agency, has released $10,000 for immediate relief work.

Doreen and Arnold Labrentz

Missionaries taking part in convention

A missionary couple involved in a literacy program of the Kenya government will take part in a week-long missions convention which begins Sunday at Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church, 842 North Park.

Rev. Arnold Labrentz and his wife, Doreen, went to Kenya 10 years ago as school teachers. The Alberta couple now is working at Evangel Press in Nairobi.

Evangel Press, the largest printing house and distributing centre for all of East Africa, is the publishing house of the Pentecostal Assemblies of God for Kenya and East Africa.

An important recent development is the literacy program sponsored by the Kenya government, of which Evangel Press is the author and publisher.

Labretz will show films of Kenya and the work of Evangel Press at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Other missionaries taking part in the convention are Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Morrison of Liberia, Rev. and Mrs. Jack Muggleton of South Africa, Rev. Mervyn Thomas of Kenya and Rev. Paul Schellert of Tanzania.

The convention begins at 9:45 a.m. Sunday at Glad Tidings and resumes at 11 a.m. Tuesday.

A women's meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday and a couples' breakfast is planned for 9 a.m. Saturday.

The convention will end with services at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. next Sunday. This Sunday, missionaries will take part in services at Glad Tidings and also at North Douglas Pentecostal Tbernacle, Douglas at Canterbury, morning and evening, and at Bethel Tabernacle, 1100 Colville, at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Council of churches

Hospital expansion called urgent need

The Greater Victoria Council of Churches approves of Premier Bennett's rejection of a gambling casino in the province, but would like to see more action on hospital care.

The council, at a general meeting Wednesday night, passed a resolution urging Health Minister Robert McClelland and his government to take steps to correct the following "unfortunate conditions which create hardship for many of our people:"

- The severe restricitons imposed upon hospital care in this city and province as a result of inadequate funding through the years.
- The necessity for additional acute care beds and related services.
- The great need for additional extended intermediate care facilities.

The resolution passed unanimously, as was one in which the premier was commended for rejecting a recent request seeking persmission to establish a gambling casino on the Mainland.

Family conference into second phase

The B.C. Conference on the Family is ready for its second phase, chairman Canon Hilary Butler announced this week.

"Phase Two is its most important part," Butler said in an interview. "We held a workshop last Tuesday for about 15 facilitators and now we are ready to go ahead."

The conference is the result of a petition presented to the Legislature by religious leaders in the province last year and it now is sponsored by the province and numerous religious bodies.

Its first phase was a meeting of about 200 British Columbians in Victoria last November to consider how to consult the people of the province.

Butler said it was decided to prepare a kit for individual groups or combined groups of families to use.

A list of seven topics for discussion was drawn up: the two-parent family and other relationships; values and morality; the family and law; housing, health and finances; professional and voluntary community support; leisure, work and the family; educational, cultural and religious influence of the family.

The subjects will be considered by groups of interested people, their views will be summarized and the findings reported back to the originators.

Butler said the reason for the project is the concern that is felt regarding the factors in society that are eroding family life.

"We want to find out what is good for the family and how we can support what is good," he said.

"I believe there is something in the air," he went on. "People are really concerned about the family and here is a mechanism through which they can speak to government, to the churches and to the agencies. We are getting very good response."

Butler believes the answers will come from the second phase.

"The collected findings will be presented to another major conference this fall," he said.

This is the first time the province has ever tried to consult everyone on a topic of such importance, Butler said, and the invjtation is out to all citizens to consider what should be done to support family life today.

Groups of individuals not awaie of the projecf can get information from Butler at 386-7781 or from the following facilitators:

Mrs. Ruth Owens, 382-1584; Ms. Etta Mack, 1020 Catherine, Victoria; Rev. Peter De Bruyne, 4160 Glanford, Victoria; 479-2018; or Rev. Harold Boyd, 1998 Estevan Road, Nanaimo.

Cult beat out 'demons', prayed for dead leader

MISSOURI VALLEY, Iowa (UPI) — Two former members of a religious cult that professed beatings to rid its members of "demons" have chosen Missouri Valley as the place to rebuild their lives.

Jim Colabianchi met and married Pat Sue Womble in Arizona a little more than a year ago when they were both members of a cult, known as the Phoenix Temple of Light, which also believed that praying over the dead would bring them back to life.

Colabianchi said he began his association with the 60-member cult five years ago. "They offered me a chance to teach the teaching of the Bible," he said.

Shortly after the Colabianchis married, a leader of the cult said she thought Pat Sue had "demons" and beat her.

"She (the leader) believed that demons could possess the body," Colabianchi said. "She also believed that Sue had demons and since we were married, I was under Sue's demons."

The group leader "punished the two of us and made us stay in a pit" full of onions about 12 feet wide and six feet deep for three days, Colabianchi said.

He said his wife left the group and went to live with her sister in Missouri Valley. He stayed with the cult until he recently decided to join his wife.

When the father of a group leader died, Colabianchi prayed over the body with the other group members in hopes of reviving "grandpa," he said. The vigil lasted more than 10 days.

Authorities found the body of 87-year-old Otis Harrel Jan. 17 and charged Harrel's daughter, Dorothy Bell, 55, and her husband, Harold, 38, with failing to bury a body within reasonable period of time. Authorities estimated Harrel had been dead three to six months.

"I feel compassion for the members of the Phoenix Light Temple," Colabianchi said. "I want to help them straighten out. My wife feels the same way."

Five complete six terms

Certificates of theology were awarded this week by Canon Thomas Bailey, second from left, chairman of Greater Victoria Lay School of Theology, to five people who have completed six terms of study since school was organized in 1973. Awards were made at meeting of Greater Victoria Council of Churches, school's sponsor. Council president Rev. Dr. Albert King is in centre of photo. Recipients of certificates are, from left, James Robertson, Mrs. Eileen Mold, Cedric Jones, Alfred Crowe and Earl Norris.

Gartrell on ordination:

Women's day near

Nine out of 30 Anglican diocesan bishops in Canada are expecting to ordain women to the priesthood in the near future, Bishop Roy Gartrell said this week.

Gartrell has just returned from the semi-annual meeting of his church's House of Bishops held in Mississauga, Ont.

"I would expct that by Nov. 30 or shortly thereafter there will be ordinations in more than one place," the bishop said.

"Nine bishops at the meeting indicated they are looking forward to such ordinations."

But it won't be happening in Victoria, he added, because there are no women candidates here for the priesthood.

"And, secondly," he said, "you don't ordain in a vacuum. Unless you have a call for a woman priest you don't have an ordination."

He said there had been indications that there are candidates in the dioceses of New Westminster, Cariboo (Kamloops) and Kootenay (Kelowna).

The ordination of women was approved in principle by Anglicans at the General Synod in Regina in 1973 and it was reaffirmed in Quebec City last June, Gartrell said.

Since that time, he said, the primate, Archbishop Edward Scott, had carried on consultations which drew no negative reaction to what the church in Canada was proposing to do.

"The issue of the ordination of women is in different stages of development throughout the world Anglican communion," Gartrell said.

"The situation is quite different in the U.S., but in New Zealand and Australia it is expected the ordination of wome could begin in a year or 18 months."

Priest may face action by church

CLEVELAND (AP) — Another Episcopal Anglican priest faces a possible church trial for letting irregularly ordained women priests celebrate communion in his church.

Church charges against Rev. Dalton Downs of Cleveland were announced as delegates to the annual convention of the Ohio Diocese of the Episcopal Church contended again with the issue of women in the priesthood.

Rev. Peter Beebe of Oberlin was tried and convicted on charges of disobedience for similar reasons in a church court last year.

Downs has told Ohio Bishop John Burt that he will not invite women priests to his church again until after the church's general convention in September. If he should decide to plead guilty to the charges and agree not to violate church law again, church sources said, he probably will receive only an admonition from the bishop.

Delegates at the weekend diocesan convention approved a resolution affirming their support for permitting women priests and also voted to reconvene later this year if the general convention does not approve the issue.

The diocese includes 116 churches in northern Ohio.

O'Connell on Island for a visit

Msgr. Michael O'Connell, former vicar-general of the Roman Catholic diocese of Victoria, will be on Vancouver Island for two public meetings next month.

Now director of ecumenism for the Canadian Catholic Conference of Bishops in Ottawa, he will give talks on ecumenism at 8 p.m. March 9 in St. Peter's parish hall, 297 Machleary, Nanaifo, and at 8 p.m. the following night in St. Andrew's activity centre, 1002 Pandora, Victoria.

His visit to the Island is being sponsored by the Victoria diocese's InterAction Team.

O'Connell is coming west for the first British Columbia consultation on church cooperation, organized by the provincial Council of Christian Churches, to be held at the Vancouver School of Theology from March 11 to 13.

Purpose of the consultation is to bring together delegates from councils of churches, ministerial associations, churches and church groups to consider how Christians may stand together, cooperate and speak out on issues of common concern and also to establish a province-wide association to promote communication and consultation between the churches.

VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. F. S. MORLEY

Once a myth is established in history it is hard to get it out. History is full of myths. It has been said "that history is a lie agreed upon." In cynical moments one is tempted to believe this is true. Take a man like Oliver Cromwell, hated as an intolerant dictator. The French ambassador reported home in September, 1656, that "the Catholics find their position better than under former kings who did not allow them freedom of worship."

The Church of England clergy were surprised to find that their congregations might meet regularly for worship and observe all their services such as christening, communion, weddings or funerals in the customary rite. Evelyn says that he found Cromwell, so far from being a despot, "connived at liberty." Cromwell gave the Jews sanctuary in Britain permitting their return. He invited the famous rabbi, Menasseh ben Israel, to come to London for discussions. After talking the matter over, Cromwell introduced a petition before the Council of State and, after much bickering with intolerant die-hards, Jews were permitted to hold services and to purchase a cemetery outside London. It took much effort on his part.

War is a merciless business, and it is hard to excuse Cromwell's severity in Ireland. Nevertheless, it was far more merciful than was practised in any other country at the time. He was a humane man. His letters are filled with concern for the poor and destitute. John Maidstone said, "He was naturally compassionate toward objects in distress, even to an effeminate measure. He did exceed in tenderness toward sufferers." Regarding war against the Dutch he said, "I do not like this war. I will do everything in my power to bring about peace." He built up British power on the seas, increased the trade, improved education, founded schools, reformed laws, and in many ways developed social welfare. General Monck said that Cromwell always disliked showing unkindness toward men whose Christian ideals differed from his own. Men like John Rogers, George Fox and John Tillinghast, whose views differed very much from his, never feared to speak their minds.

Gandhi has always been held up to the world's admiration as the apostle of peace and brotherly love. Few men in India's history have, however, caused more bloodshed, the end of which is not yet. Hendrik Kraemer says Gandhi inherited the mantle of the violent Tilak. He strangely combined in himself the aspects of St. Francis, Cromwell, Mohammed, and the subtlety of an English lawyer.

He made nationalism a religion, transforming an individualistic and entirely a-political religioon into a religio-politica. He dreamed of an undefiled Hunduland. "A holy Hindu people in a holy Hindu country." His Swaraj movement was successful because he was confronting the British people who would not tolerate the slaughter of these poor folk. Gandhi preyed upon this humanity as British weakness. When he advised the Jews in Germany to follow his example, they were ruthlessly exterminated by the Nazis. Gandhi's Swadeshi movement discarded western economic methods and the western industrial-technical type of society, turning India backwards. The effects are disastrously felt in India today. Gandhi is revered as a saint by most people in the world. Few men are less deserving of it.

Of course one could go on studying the myths of history indefinitely. The United States is represented continually as a peace-loving country, and yet, no country in history has been more imperialistic. Her expansion across America is the history of ruthless land-grabbing. Even President Wilson was imperialistic with regard to Mexico. Dollar imperialism has profundly affected Latin America. The revelations regarding the CIA brought into the open the fact that the United States is as ruthless as Russia in matters of national interest.

One of the most serious myths in history is the notion that communism has promoted the welfare of the average Russian. As a matter of fact, communism has held Russia back. In 1890, Russia was leading the world in science social welfare, music and literature. Communism pushed Russia back into the Dark Ages. It involved the slaughter of tens of millions. Russia would be far ahead in almost every conceivable way if communism had not destroyed her genius, and hampered dreadfully her progress. There is nothing to admire about communism. It has been the ghastliest failure in social experimentation known to man.

Some myths are quite harmless, but it is dangerous any time we come to make and believe a lie. Consequently many of mankind's myths have worked untold damage on the mind and development of mankind.

Blacks open door

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — A white woman's search for a religion which would accept members of her sex as pastors has ended in a black church in the small eastern New York community of Quogue.

Dedra Ann Kimensky says she is the first white woman ordained as pastor of an African Methodist Episcopal Zion church.

"I never though the church, being black, would be much interested in me," said the pastor of St. Paul's AME Zion Church. "However, they've always ordained women and it states very clearly in the church law book, Our Discipline, that there is to be no discrimination based on race.

When the other denominations were splitting hairs about my sex, this one said "Will you come and help us?"

Papal guards beefed up

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The picturesque Vatican Swiss Guards, who are still wearing uniforms deisgned by Michaelangelo, have been issued tear gas bombs, said Co. Pfyfer D'Altishofen, head of the guards. In addition to the new chemical weapon, the 90-man force has submachine-guns and rifles with bayonets.

Rock albums put to torch

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — "Rock music and dirty magazines have no place in a Christian life," said Steve Canfield, a 25-year-old member of a youth crusade, and about 50 students from the Hollywood Christian Academy put their rock albums and magazines in a barrell and set them afire.

Guatemala Emergency Relief.

Last week most of Guatemala City and surrounding area was rocked by earthquakes that have left thousands dead and more thousands homeless.

World Vision of Canada, a Christian humanitarian service agency reacted immediately with $20,000 in relief funds sent to the area in keeping with its goal of "meeting emergency needs in crisis areas of the world, through existing agencies."

World Vision of Canada is seeking to raise an additional $100,000 through the Christian community in Canada. The funds will be used in rehabilitative and development efforts designed to get the population back on its feet. Your donations are urgently needed and are income tax deductible.

Thank you in Jesus' name.

Dramatic Upturn in Business Expected in Next Six Months

VANCOUVER (CP) — There has been a dramatic improvement in British Columbia's business outlook for the first half of 1976, according to William Hamilton, B.C. Employers' Council president.

The majority of respondents' to a council survey believe business conditions will improve in the first six months of this year, Hamilton told an economic forum sponsored by the council.

Hamilton selected highlights from the survey, which was submitted to 156 B.C. companies employing 166,000 people.

The respondents felt that unemployment has reached a plateau, with 52 per cent expecting it to remain the same during the first six months, and 20 per cent expecting it to decrease, Hamilton said.

The emphasis placed on the average unemployment figure has encouraged many questionable economic policies, Hamilton commented.

"What we are now likely to see, if governments are wise, are policies directed in a very specific manner to creating jobs for high unemployment groups."

Thirty-seven per cent think the inflation rate will remain the same, while 29 per cent expect it to decrease, he said. This adds up to about two-thirds tending to be optimistic, compared with 45 per cent at the start of 1975.

He said the improvement is probably due partly to expectations based on the federal government's anti-inflation program.

Another area which has shown a dramatic change, Hamilton continued, is labor-management relations, which 17 per cent of the respondents think will improve. Six months ago no one anticipated an improvement.

When the business climate question is broken down by industry, 60 per cent of primary industry respondents expect the climate will be better in the first half, 39 per cent of secondary industry, and the same percentage of service industry. Only 16 per cent, 14 per cent and 14 per cent respectively think conditions will worsen.

But judging from results of the question on capital investment intentions, caution is still the order of the day, Hamilton noted. Investment at new locations or for a new product or service is not expected to grow, he said.

How to COPE with Kids

elizabeth forbes

family

You're a mother with one or two little people in the three to five age group.

They're active to the point of sending you "up the wall" at times.

How to cope . . . how to cope . . . is the question that runs most frequently through your mind.

Well, there's an answer to that question.

At least that is what I'm told by mothers with the same age children who have experienced the same sort of trauma.

It's to be found in the Vancouver Island Co-operative Pre-school Association (COPE—as it is aptly and popularly known) that presently has at least 600 families active in pre-school groups in this area, up at Departure Bay, over on Salt Spring Island and at Parksville and Comox.

Talking to Doreen Newell and Helen Thornton, vice-president and secretary respectively of COPE, I learned each group works as an independent unit.

Each one is owned and operated by parents of pre-school children, three to five years of age, and each one offers educational and playing activities, in half-day sessions for those children.

"It also includes a learning experience for the parents," Mrs. Newell said.

Mrs. Thornton explained that these pre-school groups meet, in most instances, in church halls.

One or two here are based in public schools (Margaret Jenkins has a group) and out in Sooke there is one in the Indian Cultural Hall.

In every group the children are provided with a variety of play areas and play materials. They have playmates their own age.

And both Mrs. Newell and Mrs. Thornton tell you they are sure that a child's successful experience in one of these groups, "serves as the readiness bridge to the primary grades."

Parents who have children in a pre-school class (mothers or fathers) serve in some capacity in planning ad organization work. They also give certain amount of time during a month as teacher-helpers.

"In that way the child's first educational step is taken together," Mrs. Newell suggests, "and you have a growth experience for both children and parents."

Parents' meetings are held from time to time, with discussion periods on progress of difficulties experienced by the children.

Before a parent goes into a pre-school class to help there is a learning period that gives the over-all picture of his or her place in that class and the work to be done in co-operation wit the teacher-in-charge.

President of the association is Tricia Ward-Moran. She and her executive members act as a liaison between the various groups.

Each group sends a representative to association meetings, held in Victoria, once a month.

"In this way we are able to unite and to assist the member groups in providing a high standard of pre-school education, supported by the co-operative efforts of parents and teachers."

Co-operative pre-school programs are not new in Victoria, Mrs. Newell reminded me.

First of these groups was organized by Mrs. W. W. Mcill, more than 25 years ago. They met in the garden at her home off North Quadra Street.

It's interesting to note that Thelma Varcoe, teacher at the Margaret Jenkins pre-school group today, started that work with Mrs. McGill.

Gradually, as the movement grew, a local association was formed as part of the Vancouver Co-operative Pre-School Organization.

In 1972, the local branch decided to form its own association, with its own by-laws.

Today, the Vancouver Island Co-operative Pre-School Association and its members groups are within the jurisdiction of the provincial department of Human Resources.

"We present yearly reports to that department and we adhere to certain department rules," says Mrs. Newell.

In each individual group effort is made to maintain an adult-children ratio of one to five or six. That includes two parent helpers. An effort is also made to keep each class to an average of 15 to 18.

The regular school year is followed, including spring break and other annual holidays.

In concluding, both Doreen Newell and Helen Thornton made it clear that "the most important job facing us today is the job of giving our children the best possible chance to learn how to grow up into mature, alert, constructive men and women."

What we need most urgently at this time they say, "are citizens with keen, curious minds, who can think imaginatively, who have true regard for the welfare and wishes of others, and who can work with them to the advantage of all."

The basis for these characteristics is laid during the first six years of life, they remind you, "the period in which parents have major responsibility for the development of their children."

And they believe "co-operative pre-schools help parents to fulfill that responsibility more effectively than they could by working alone."

With this in mind — and also with thought of keeping those three and four-year-olds from really driving you up "up the wall" about these co-operative pre-school groups.

Her telephone number is 652-3551.

UNDER THE COUNTER

Juvenile Diabetes (Mellitus) is a condition in which for some reason, insufficient insulin is produced by the pancreas or insufficient is released into the body.

The diabetes can occur in a child at any age so a hitherto healthy, lively child showing some of the following signs and symptoms should be taken to a doctor. Undue tiredness and irritability, loss of weight and increased need for extra drinks, frequent desire to urinate day and night. And, quite often the skin will be itchy. A diabetic child and its parents are taught to understand the condition, and how to control it, so that the child may live a normal life. And these children do.

Any school teacher or youth leader involved with the child should be kept fully informed by the child's parents, and provided with pop or sugary candy by them at all times in case the child experiences an insulin reaction. Most reactions in a controlled diabetic are caused by the insulin rather than the diabetes.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Roy Imports has a 28-year tradition of quality . . .

When you walk into Roy's you get the feeling "My, what a cozy little shop!" So different from others . . . more like one of those quaint, age-old shops you find on one of those winding main streets in the Old Country! . . . Solid oak counters and oak sweater cases with a wealth of sweaters behind glass doors to keep them fresh . . . This is Roy's 28th year of bringing to Victoria imports that are found only in the better shops . . . Fairisle sweaters that are really Roy Imports classics . . . and certainly terrific value for your dollar . . . "Crock of Gold" Irish scarves, stoles and skirts in gossamer wools . . . Perfumes and toiletries by Floris of London (who supply Royalty of all nations) . . . Joy and Cabochard perfumes . . . Compacts, scarves and squares by Liberty . . . Ceramic owls and spring bouquets by Kurf Sutton . . . Silver, pewter and enameled jewellery by David Andersen of Oslo . . . Beautiful flannel and shantung suits by Maytair . . . and more to come . . . Truly a well-rounded stock, well presented by Roy's quiet and helpful staff, eager to assist you in your personal and gift selections . . . We suggest you drop in soon to . . . Roy Imports, 817 Government St., 384-4737 and their Village Shop in James Bay Square, 384-4932.

The ultimate in luxury . . .

We see so many clothes in the course of our ramblings about town that it takes a bit of doing to really leave us speechless with admiration . . . but that's exactly what happened at Gibson's this week when we were shown two outfits by Malcolm Starr which we can only describe as the ultimate in luxury! . . . Understated elegance would be another way of putting it, and, as all fashion-conscious women should know, understatement is the real essence of elegance! . . . Not to keep you in suspense any longer, the outfits are as follows: . . . A pure silk reefer coat, vest, and straight French skirt in an outrageously flattering tone of cream . . . with black silk shirt blouse to complete the ensemble . . . If you wanted to make this dressier you could also get the tie neck blouse in egg-shell pure silk . . . wear it with the coat and skirt . . . The second outfit is trousers, vest and blazer in the same cream silk, with black silk shirt, and a black silk square for your head or whatever . . . Think of all the combining you could do with either one of these outfits . . . or better still, with both! . . . They're really different . . . and so exquisitely made . . . with much hand finishing . . . button holes, zippers, etc. . . . that you'll get a sybaritic joy out of wearing them if you love genuine luxury! . . . Sizes 8-10-12 at . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

New pots and potters! . . .

It's always cause for rejoicing at the Handloom when they acquire new potters . . . because they only sell the works of the very best . . . and regardless of how many potters' creations are on display, each one is individual and recognizable by the cognoscenti! . . . The new potters are Danny Lasko, Greg Thompson and Colin Fraser, all of Vancouver . . . and believe us, they're really good! . . . Just to single out one item, there's a lovely big casserole by Danny Lasko, in a rust brown glaze, with a nice wide lip and beautifully fitting lid . . . We saw teapots, jugs, covered jars . . . a beehive butter dish . . . and planters made withoutside holes so you can use them in your own macrame hangers . . . We especially like the good shapes and earthy colors of all these new "pots" . . . Noticed a lot of hand-woven ties from Quebec and New Brunswick . . . nice colors and textures . . . and Handloom has all sorts of other woven things like bags, skirts, etc. . . . And some gorgeous hand-beaten brass utensils with bone handles, some inlaid with abalone . . . By the way, Handloom's Empress shop will be closed until March 17 due to expansion renovations . . . Handloom, 625 Trounce Alley, 384-1011.

Newest type of timekeeper is the digital "push button" watch.

Impacts now has its own designer! . . .

Now we know that certain prestigeous stores like Bergdorf Goodman in New York . . . have their own individual designers . . . but we don't imagine it's happened in Victoria before . . . until now, at least! . . . Impacts n' Imports is the store in question . . . and their own private, exclusive designer in Bonita Jackson, who made quite a name for herself at her Bastion Boutique! . . . We saw Bonita this week busily doing her "thing" at Impacts . . . She'll be designing clothes for the shop . . . for instance, one of her immediate projects is making long and short skirts to match the Bleyle tops for spring . . . so Impacts will always have exclusive things in stock which you'll never find anywhere else . . . But on top of this, Bonita will specialize in custom designing . . . Let's say you've been on a trip and come home with some gorgeous fabrics . . . Take them to Bonita and let her inspiration take over . . . She'll design and make you something very special! . . . But you don't need to supply your own material . . . If you crave something very exclusive, just go into a huddle with Bonita . . . who's in the shop Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays . . . Impacts 'n Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

In praise of more beautiful bathrooms . . .

A bathroom-is-a-bathroom, right? . . . Wrong! . . . A bathroom that's been given the "Magic Touch" of accessories from the Bath Boutique is something special . . . a room to luxuriate in and enjoy to the hilt! . . . Among the unique accessories we saw there this week are some beautiful wicker and bamboo hampers, wastepaper baskets, shelves, tissue holders and magazine racks . . . the hampers and shelves in three different sizes and all in natural color wicker with bamboo trim . . . They're made in Taiwan, and are really different and intriguing! There's even a bathroom scale in a plaited wicker which would tie in nicely with the foregoing! . . . We saw an awful lot of new and positively exciting things in this exclusive new bathroom shop . . . more than we can possibly tell you about today . . . but we do want to mention the loofahs because so many people are interested in acquiring one of these age-old natural gourd sponges which are so wonderfuly stimulating to the skin, and improve circulation, to boot! . . . The Bath Boutique has a big supply of loofahs in the form of mitts, back massagers and sponges . . . Did you know loofahs were first used thousands of years ago and are described in ancient manuscripts? . . . Just goes to show that progress isn't everything! . . . The Bath Boutique, James Bay Square, Simcoe & Menzies St., 385-2523.

Never use home cleaners or sprays on suede. Just brush with a sponge.

New in from Paris . . .

We don't care what anyone says . . . there's something about French Clothes which makes them stand out in a crowd! . . . Last Monday we dropped in to Eaton's Import Room in time to see them unpacking some new things just arrived from Paris . . . Raincoats by Daniel Hechter in two different styles . . . One a white poplin with drawstring waist, and very attractive crisscross stitching detail down either sleeve . . . Also in black . . . The other style is a double-breasted trenchcoat in white or wheat . . . (a lighter shade of camel) . . . We should mention here that drawstring waists, and even sleeves . . . will be popular for spring . . . The other French shipment consists of dresses by George Rech of Paris . . . Short-sleeved cotton shirtdresses in white or navy with a narrow pin stripe in the opposite color . . . and polyester blends with the small stand-up collars which are also a spring fashion feature . . . A 3-piece outfit of grey pants and vest has a navy blazer . . . all in very fine wool worsted . . . Another smart ensemble has white flannel skirt and a fuller and longer navy blazer, very casual in mood . . . Why not go and have a look at these new arrivals at . . . Eaton's Import Room, 384-7141, loc. 242.

Make this your year for Europe . . .

"Take these and read them" Paulin's told us, thrusting into our hand a sheaf of color brochures for tours out of London . . . Well, we've been doing just that . . . and are completely agog with the hundreds of marvellous coach tours originating in London . . . to all parts of Europe . . . North Africa . . . the U.S.S.R. . . . lasting anything from five to 25 days! . . . These new tour brochures are from Global, Fourways, Frames, Trafalgar and Cosmos . . . and we understand there are others, too . . . So if you want some fascinating reading go in to Paulin's and ask for them . . . We want to repeat once more that Paulin's have government-approved departure dates for all the Wardair charter flights right through this year . . . and bookings are really getting heavy . . . WONDERFUL WORLD OF ANIMALS

DEAR DR. MILLER: Everyone around here, including my husband, children, or cats and dogs, are scratching from fleas. I hope we'll be rid of them long before you answer this letter but just in case we're not, I'm wondering whether fleas ever bite parakeets. So far Captain Hawk, he's ours, hasn't been. At least he's the only non-scratcher in the house. — T.A.

DEAR T.A.: Captain Hawk has a fair chance of remaining aloof from this parasitic problem provided he remains caged. In the event fleas eventually catch up to him, he might be stimulated to join your scratching society. Like those already initiated, he wouldn't be too enthusiastic a member. Fleas are seldom a menace to parakeets except on rare occasions to nestlings.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The last bird gravel I bought for my parakeets has charcoal in it. This is claimed to aid digestion. Is this high-priced grit really better for my birds? If you please, I'd like the facts on this.—R.A.

DEAR R.A.: To get to the nitty-gritty of your question, no. While your parakeets do need grit, they don't need the charcoal. In fact, it could be detrimental. There's no proof charcoal improves a parakeet's digestion and it may actually create nutritional deficiencies by absorbing some vitamins from the intestinal tract.

FREE ASKING FOR THE

By HARRIET HART

When you eat fresh or canned salmon, you are probably not aware of how often this fish changed its abode before it was caught. It has probably lived several years in the ocean and then returned — sometimes two thousand miles — to a river to spawn.

The well-known Canadian author Rolerick L. Haig-Brown has written a captivating, informative booklet about "Canada's Pacific Salmon."

This richly illustrated publication explains that British Columbia is the home of five species of salmon: Sockeye, Pink, Coho, Chum and Chinook. The author discusses the characteristics and spawning habits of each of the five species and how they are caught.

You probably know that sockey is the most precious salmon because its exquisite flavour and reddish flesh can be maintained under any storage condition. One of the sockeye's pecularities is that it feeds mainly on small, hard-shelled creatures, such as shrimps, whereas the other salmons prefer small fish.

You will also learn that the sockeye has the most complicated way of life, the pink salmon has the simplest and the chinook is the largest of all salmons. When it is ready to spawn, it may weigh between 15 and 20 pounds, or more.

Jellied Waldorf Salad

By MARY MOORE

Does the idea of a jellied Waldorf salad appeal to you?

Sometimes I object to the chewiness of Waldorf salad so I set out to correct that.

My former Sunday School class now call themselves The Group of Seven. Two of them, Sue and Blair, are married to each other and had their first Christmas party for the group in December.

I was asked to bring jellied salad. I am not fond of jellied salads but reluctantly acquieseed. By rare chance my daughter Marianne was here on a 3-day visit which coincided with the party so she was invited too.

We took along our jellied Waldorf and I was satisfied with it — I even liked it.

WALDORF MAYONNAISE MOULD
(serves 6 to 8)

½ c. cold water
2 pkgs. (2 tbsp.) plain gelatin
1 19-oz. can apple juice
2 tbsp. lemon juice
½ tsp. salt
1½ c. diced (¼") unpared red apple (1 large Mac)
1½ c. finely chopped inner celery
½ to ¾ c. coarsely chopped pecans
6 whole pecans
½ c. genuine mayonnaise (do not use salad dressing)

Soak gelatin in a large bowl in the cold water 2 minutes then stand bowl in shallow boiling water and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add apple and lemon juice and salt and stir to mix. Pour ¾ cup into bottom of DEEP 4-cup mould and chill until set.

Meanwhile chop celery and nuts and apples. Immediately pour ½ cup of the liquid jelly over apples to prevent browning.

When jelly in bottom of mould is set arrange the 6 whole pecans in a circle on it and sprinkle some chopped apple around edge. Carefully pour ½ cup liquid jelly over; not to disturb design and chill until set.

To remaining liquid jelly add the mayonnaise and with a wire whip beat eo combine until smooth. Add all remaining apples, celery and pecans to mayonnaise-jelly mixture when second layer of jelly is set and add it to the mould and refrigerate until set and firm.

To turn out loosen sides with long slender pointed knife. Then stand mould in very hot water for 5 second. Invert fancy plate over top and turn over and out. If desired garnish with a border of unpared red apple wedges which have been dipped in lemon juice to prevent browning.

All the young people liked this and it was pretty on Sue's buffet table.

Welch Medical Report

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

Fungal infestation between the toes, commonly called "athlete's foot," in its "dry" form consists of relatively symptom-free scaling of the skin, which will usually clear up promptly with appropriate hygienic measures and the application of one of many antifungal ointments or lotions.

But when there is marked sweating of the feet as in summer, or as in the case of those unfortunates — and they are a goodly number — whose feet tend to sweat excessively at any time of year, athlete's foot can become a troublesome and resistant problem.

White and evil-smelling, the erosions between the toes and insistent itching are often quite resistant to the usually effective antifungal medications.

This is the itching and malodorous form of athlete's foot that so often seems virtually uncontrollable. The clue, however, to the successful management of this smelly nuisance is in the control of wetness.

According to recent work of skin specialists, when fungus-infested feet sweat excessively, bacteria invade the lesions and produce the symptoms that characterize "wet" athlete's foot.

The bacterial invasion may be so penetrating as to suppress the fungi which may even disappear for a time. But it is essentially a combination of the bacteria and fungi that is encouraged by the wetness. And it is the wetness that is crucial in keeping the lesions from healing.

The skin specialists who interested themselves in this resistant problem tested several compounds that stop up the sweat glands and found that a 30 per cent solution of aluminium chloride (the essential ingredient in many popular antiperspirant preparations) applied twice daily with a cotton-tipped applicator kept the spaces between the toes dry and relieved the itching within two or three days. The evil smell disappeared and within a week the symptoms had quieted.

When symptomatic "wet" athlete's foot has been cleared, the "dry" form, which is usually without symptoms, remains and can be treated effectively with conventional antifungal preparations.

dear abby

He's a Dirty Bird

DEAR ABBY: First there appeared in your column a letter from a woman who complained because her husband bought a myna bird and taught it to say dirty words and phrases. Then, John D. Maybe wrote in suggesting that the wife threaten her husband with arrest for contributing to the delinquency of a myna.

Now I have a message for John: Dear John, why don't you myna your own business?"—Jake Smith, San Diego

DEAR JAKE: You're funnier than (John (maybe).

DEAR ABBY: I am a teenager, and because so many adults keep asking us "ungrateful" teenagers what we want, I have finally found an answer that I think says everything:

I am a teenager and this is what I want:

I want time to be alone—alone with my thoughts.

I want to be accepted for what I am.

I want to be loved by those who brought me into this world.

I want a home that is rich in honesty, sharing and caring.

I want to be heard: I just might have something to say that you need to hear.

I want to know more about myself—my sexuality, my desires, my goals.

I want to know God and worship Him in my own way.

I want to live my life one day at a time; for only then will I know its fullness.

And as I would live my life for me, so would I have you live your life for you.—A Teenager

DEAR TEENAGER: Good. Did you write it? If not, I would like to offer my congratulations to the author.

DEAR ABBY: I met a young lady about six months ago. Our romance progressed to the point of marriage.

After some uneasy times between us, things got so bad that one night I lost my temper and in a fit of anger, I hit her.

She had been married before, and she told me that her ex-husband used to beat her up. She promised herself that she would never let another man lay a hand on her.

Now that I have hit her once she thinks it will happen again and has therefore refused to see me again.

Abby, I love this girl with all her heart and am willing to do anything to make up with her, but she won't budge.

How can I get her to give me another chance? I have promised it would never happen again, but she doesn't believe me.—Lost In Houston.

DEAR LOST: Sorry, I'm with her. Who knows when you'll lose your temper and in a fit of anger hit her again? Better start over with a new girl and a fresh slate.

DEAR DEADER: Today is St. Valentine's Day, so be a sweetheart and call someone who's alone and say, "I'm thinking of you." Take some flowers to someone in a nursing home. Put all your discarded clothes in a box for Goodwill. Laugh at an old joke. Donate some blood. Do your exercises. Pay your dentist bill. Listen to your teenager. Tell your parents you think they're great. Tape a love note on his (or her) mirror. Forgive an enemy. If you love someone tell him (or her) now!

Korean Wetbacks Use the Sewers

TOYKO (UPI) — Before the eyes of startled police, manhole covers on a street in Osaka began flipping open late one night, and men and women emerged soaking wet from the storm sewers below.

Captured on the spot, they turned out to be illegal immigrants from South Korea.

They had swum to shore from a Korean freighter in Osaka harbor, and crawled 1,000 feet up a storm sewer in Japan's second largest city.

Lured by Japan's high wages and living standards, thousands of South Koreans try each year to smuggle themselves into the Land of the Rising Sun.

The immigration bureau of the Japanese Justice Ministry says 4,480 were captured and deported in the five year-period 1970-74.

"And that's only the tip of the iceberg," remarked one officer.

Immigration officials estimate that between 40,000 and 100,000 South Korean illegal immigrants are living in the country. Most are concentrated in the Korean districts of big Japanese cities like Tokyo and Osaka.

The risks of slipping into Japan are terrible, and many Koreans have drowned trying.

One simple statistic tells why the tide flows on. Per capita gross national product in Japan last year was $4,130. South Korea's figure was $513.

Many Korean illegals like Mrs. Kang Yung-ja, 25, are in tears when they are arrested and sent home.

Mrs. Kang was caught recently, four months after wading ashore from a Korean fishing boat.

She was working 14 hours a day, six days a week for a wholesale luggage dealer in Yokahama for about $200 a month plus room and board. Most of her wages were being sent to her sick husband and two children in Korea.

"We're different from these Japanese who are used to a lot of leisure," Mrs Kang said. "We never play, if we're making money."

Connivance on both sides of the Japan Sea, which separates the two countries, makes the traffic possible.

Police suspect that some Japanese employers put up the fees of $700 to $1,000 required to smuggle a Korean into Japan. The Koreans are cheap, diligent workers. They seldom make trouble because they don't want to be turned into the authorities and sent home.

On the Korean side are "brokers" who make the contacts between would-be emigrants and the captains of fishing vessels and small freighters that carry them to Japan.

A Heinous Crime

LONDON (UPI) — The man in the dock had stolen something very precious, and the judge was stern.

"Potatoes might be compared with jewelry these days," lectured Magistrate Mark Romer. "Due to the price of potatoes this offence of stealing them has become prevalent. A fine must be imposed to deter people like you."

And he slapped a 100 pound ($202) fine upon Andrew Carlin, potato thief.

Why on earth would anyone want to steal potatoes?

Why is Dennis Bradley, who normally guards payrolls and gold bullion, standing nightly guard with his gun and Prince, his fierce Alsatian, on 200 tons of potatoes in a farmer's barn?

Why has Norman Higgins, who owns a north-of-England cafe, offered his $2,500 speedboat as a swap for 7½ tons of spuds?

Because there's an aching hunger for potatoes in half of Europe, that's why.

Prices are sky-high, Common Market ministers wring their hands and some very complicated double shuffling is going on.

A survey of the great potato famine uncovered one note of cheer for those who, like the British, demand chips with everything. Go east, young man, go east, or south.

There's no potato problem in Poland or Russian, in Italy or Greece, in Austria and Switzerland.

Spain has fritos in plenty, but potatoes in neighboring Portugal doubled in price almost overnight, Finland mashes merrily away, but imports and prices in next-door Sweden and Denmark are zooming.

As in so many things European these days, Britain is worst off.

English housewives are paying 25 cents a pound for the lowly spud. Stocks on hand — a third of normal — will be gone by April. Grocers say tht price will be 45 cents a pound by then.

Potatoes are almost as expensive in Germany, Italy and Yugoslavia and even worse in Denmark, the survey showed only government subsidies, price ceilings and extra imports have peeled the price in Belgium, Sweden and Portugal.

The root of the potato problem grew in 1974. There was a great crop that year, so prices took a nosedive.

Naturally farmers planted fewer spuds in 1975. Then came a hot, dry summer the potatoes hated. Germany's crop, a third of the common market's potatoes, was down a quarter, Yugoslavia's down by 50 per cent, Europe's generally by 25 per cent.

Following the law of supply and demand, prices therefore went wild.

Government after government tried to slap a lid on them. Some results were almost comic. Take Belgium.

Belgium claims to have invented French fries. It serves them with everything. It sell them in paper cups in tiny "friture" shops which sell nothing else.

Thus potatoes loom large in the cost of living index. Trying to keep that index down, the government slapped on a ceiling price of 11 cents a pound on potatoes. Two things happened.

One, Belgian growers stopped selling potatoes in Belgium. Two, they shipped them by the ton across the border to Holland, where prices are higher.

Holland, meanwhile, merrily shipped its own spuds all over the place — about 100,000 tons to Sweden, what a Danish official called "very large amounts" to Denmark, 172,500 tons to Britain so far this winter.

Helen's Success Almost Didn't Happen

audrey johnson

A former Victoria actress and dancer, a native of this city who, with her husband, follows an interesting career in the United States, is co-author of Bastion's current children's theatre production, Byron the Wonderful Bandit.

Helen Erawan—her stage name; maiden name, Marmo; married name, Ofield — grew up in Victoria, attending Margaret Jenkins and Oak Bay Junior and Senior Secondary Schools and was early recognized as one of those fortunate mortals who are super-endowed.

Pretty and graceful with a lovely singing voice (both her mother and father were musical), she quickly proved exceptional in dancing classes and in dramatic productions at her schools.

Best actress awards fell into her hands at school drama festivals for two consecutive years of senior secondary school and after graduation Helen set her sights on the National Theatre School in Montreal.

Winning the best senior actress award in 1959, when she was 16, brought Helen her first chance of study in an acting school. The scholarship prize provided her with six weeks at UBC's summer school of theatre where she was selected for the powerful lead role opposite Leo Ciceri in Bertolt Brecht's Caucassian Chalk Circle.

In an interview at the time the youthful an intense actress confided that the role, "lets loose all sorts of terrifying impulses, which I didn't know I had. You should see me take the ingenue to pieces in little screaming bits."

Between the summers of 1959 and 1961, Helen proved that she had the kind of unquenchable ambition and drive and the will to work without which all physical and artistic endowments are almost always wasted.

She grasped every opportunity to act and perform, appearing on the Theatre Guild stage at Langham Court among other places, on more than one occasion.

In 1961 she was granted a National Theatre School audition with Powys Thomas and Jean Gascon. As a result she was one of 30 candidates chosen from across Canada and was granted a full tuition scholarship of $3,000.

That was the climax of the first phase of Helen's student career in her native city.

However, it looked momentarily as though it might also lead nowhere. Her parents, with young children to consider, could not afford to underwrite her living expenses for four years in Montreal.

But when Powys Thomas, then artistic director of the English language section of the National Theatre School, heard about this he telephoned from Montreal.

"Just send her," he told Mr. and Mrs. Marmo. "Under any circumstances. We'll take care of her."

She went and they did. That the effort was well worth while is shown in the fact that Helen graduated three and a half years later with honors.

Work on television and marriage to writer-film-maker Jack Ofield have highlighted her career since then.

She and her husband—who is also a co-author of Byron—formed their own producing company some time ago in the U.S.; its title, Bowling Green Films Inc.

Among recent productions have been a State Bi-centennial two-part documentary on the daily life of the average soldier during the American Revolution.

Another is Inheritance, seen on Channel Nine, which is a series on the work and lives of old-time craftspeople of the American Northeast. The series is co-written and narrated by Helen Erawan.

A 140-year-old farmhouse on four acres in upstate New York is home for the Ofields.

The household includes Ofield's two sons by a former marriage and three adopted children.

Helen's father, Walter Marmo, still lives in Victoria, at 1791 Feltham.

An important footnote to this story of one of Victoria's talented daughters lies in the observation that 15 years after Helen's near missed opportunity, another similarly gifted Victoria student came close to missing her great opportunity for lack of virtually the same amount in maintenance money.

Singer Pierann Moon's student career was also rescued at the last moment through the goodwill and appreciative support of individuals. She is now studying in Munich.

My point is that we have made no progress in seeing that these near misses and anxieties are not repeated ad infinitum. It seems that we still lack a source from which such students could obtain a long-term, low-interest loan to supplment tuition scholarships.

Getting too much too easily—having all the bumps in the path magically smoothed away—is often a bad thing. But it is equally bad to allow time and opportunity for suitable artistic students to be wasted through funding difficulties.

"Suitable" is defined as those who have proved by attitude and work habits that they will make the most of what they have and what they receive.

They're a rare breed and their numbers are probably not more, and maybe a good deal less, than a dozen in any one Canadian province.

To their number I would add those starry amateurs who are their parallels in sports. It is high time Canada got behind her gifted sons and daughters with something more than a pat on the head, a celebrity lunch and a plaque.

Other countries provide all that is required in time and money to allow their best young artists and athletes to achieve peak performance. What's the matter with us? Can it be that we're miserly—or just indifferent?

ROBERT

He Likes Variety

Last year a finalist in the piano championship medallion competition of Victoria Music Festival, 20-year-old Robert Holliston is preparing to be a contender in several classes of the 1976 festival.

It has been a favorite compaint of those who like to criticize festivals that students spend months preparing one or two pieces in pursuit of high marks, and that their field of study and experience was therefore restricted.

Holliston is living proof that this is not necessarily, nor even often, true.

He has done extensive concert work, both as a chamber and solo performer, in the Victoria area and on television in the last couple of years. He is planning a solo recital at the Conservatory of Music in March and a tour of Britain with violinist David Sabey during July and August.

Victoria-born, the young pianist began his studies with Winifred Scott Wood, who is still his teacher.

He enjoys accompaniment work and last spring was pianist with French horn player Jacqueline Spring when she represented B.C. at the National Music Festival in Toronto.

The Lady Is Cute, but It's All Fluff

A Movie Review
By Nora Hutchison

Lucky Lady is not the sort of movie that people who read movie criticism are likely to go to but it's such a big, expensive production in which so much genuine talent has been ill-used, that I don't think it should be ignored.

It is probably one of the "trifles" I've seen — absolutely guaranteed to win over a mass audience — and damn their vague suspicions that they've seen it all before.

MINELLI AS CLAIRE . . . sawdust doll

Nothing has been left to chance. The writing team, Willard Huyck and Gloria Katz, who co-authored American Graffiti, has come up with a catalogue of currently favored cliches: 1930's nostalgia along the California-Mexico coastline; the sleazy glamor of beaded gowns, lounge lizards, Art Deco bars and hotel suites; a pair of good guys from the other side of the law; and a "lovable" broad with achingly empty eyes and a brassy determination to get rich quick.

Huyck and Katz tie it all together — the broad (Liza Minnelli) takes on the two guys (Gene Hackman and Burt Reynolds) and they're a happy threesome. They get hooked on a scheme for running booze up the coast from Mexico to L.A. via a battered sloop. They fall out with a nasty caricature of a gangster — Christie McTeague — and, eventually, they take him on in a vengeful climax, complete with a battle at sea between a flotilla of badly equipped rum runners and McTeague's armoured cruisers.

Huyck and Katz drew from their experience to write American Graffiti, and that movie has real vitality — the characters are crudely drawn but they're alive. Lucky Lady's characters are no more than wooden-heads — with eyes batting, mouths grinning, feet tippy-tapping, all on cue. There is no real drama in this movie and no real comedy either. Five minutes screen time is all you need to see that these characters have nothing to show you or to tell you, and what's worse, you know that it was all planned that way. Cute is the key, cute and archly empty.

There's been a good deal of press about this movie — news releases have recounted the trials of the year-long shooting schedule; tie-in ads with jewelry and dress fashions have decorated the pages of women's magazines. Hackman and Reynolds have joked with talk show hosts about the variety of endings that were shot — the original which displeased the preview audiences, another which features a make-shift happy ending, and a third, apparently created from recutting original footage, which will probably show up on the film when it goes into re-release. Such a lot of effort to protect a property that should have sunk, but Twentieth Century Fox spent close to $15 million on this production because they still believe that lots of money can make movie magic.

The casting is a travesty. Agents — those dealmakers who negotiate for actors, production teams and distribution companies — put together the trio of Liza Minelli, Gene Hackman and Burt Reynolds, figuring, no doubt, that the movie could make it on star power alone. But as a trio, they just fizzle.

Liza Minelli, when she's on top of her talent and reaching her audience with all the stops out, can carry a movie property entirely on her own energy. But in Lucky Lady, she's only allowed to flounce. She plays the role of Clair like she played Sally Bowles in Cabaret — tough as nails on the outside, a scared, cowering kid underneath. But this performance is no more than a pale imitation, lacking style and imagination. Sally Bowles had a heart, and Liza found it — Claire is just a sawdust doll.

Burt Reynolds and Gene Hackman have predictably doltish roles as a couple of down-at-the-heels rummies. Neither takes his role seriously but Hackman, who has the talent, also has the wit and intelligence to play down his role, and he comes off the better for it.

Stanley Donen, who has directed this film, was responsible for the chic and snap of Two for the Road, Bedazzled and Charade. He is not a really creative force, but he can, in his best moments and when the conditions are right, act as a kind of genial catalyst. This story, with its hokey characters and big-budget destructo-scenes is remote from his ken. Lucky Lady is, all the way down the line, nothing more than a series of unfortunate mismatches.

Moscow Warms Up to 007

By CHRISTOPHER S. WREN

MOSCOW — James Bond, that suave superspy of novel and film, has been reviewed more kindly by the Soviet press now that he has given up matching wits with Soviet agents and turned his talents to foiling apolitical master criminals.

A fresh appraisal in the new issue of the influential writers' union weekly, Literaturnaya Gazeta, noted approvingly that Bond, known to his fans as 007, had mellowed from "an omnipotent superman" into a "cheerful and easy-going gentleman," the weekly mentioned the newest James Bond film, "Man with the Golden Gun."

Literaturnaya Gazeta detected "political reasons" behind the original James Bond film role created by Sean Connery.

"The novels by Ian Fleming, which served as the basis for the films about James Bond — the terror of the 'agents of the East' — were a creation of the cold war and shared its fate," said the article by L. Pavlov.

But James Bond as currently played by Roger Moore has become "a more modest character," said Literaturnaya Gazeta, which declared that the transition came about because filmgoers were "fed up with spy mania."

While Literaturnaya Gazeta tantalized its readers with a rare picture of a pistol-wielding James Bond protecting a pair of scantily clad women friends, it still seemed highly unlikely that 007, even at truce with his adversaries of the old Smersh, would ever make it to the Soviet movie screens.

A handful of American movies are shown here, but they seem generally selected to point up some flaw of life in the United States. Two American films widely shown in the last year were "Slaves," which dealt with slavery in the antebellum South, and "Oklahoma Crude," about a woman defending her oil well against oil barons.

The newest American movie in Soviet theatres has been "The New Centurions," about policemen in Los Angeles. Some Moscow filmgoers said they were shocked by its depiction of urban street violence.

An article in the current Literaturnaya Gazeta said that the film, for all its "frightening abundance of firearms," was misleading Soviet viewers because it portrayed American policemen too sympathetically as "the vigilant and honest guardian of public order."

The author, K. Seleznev, who is an historian, contended that any student of American affairs "knows how far this idyll is from the truth."

The first thing to meet the demonstrators, strikers and fighters against racial discrimination are the truncheon and the bullet of the 'cop,' as the American poor derisively call the police, he said.

Seleznev went on to assert that "the bourgeois police are tainted by corruption" and concerned "with guarding the class rule of the bourgeoisie" and that the film represented only "another attempt to paste over this truth."

In evaluating the new image it had discerned for James Bond, the weekly still cautioned that "the myth of James Bond continues to fulfill its ideological mission: to be a spiritual narcotic for the widest masses of the audience."

Several years ago, the James Bond fad prompted a trio of Soviet writers to collaborate in a spoof called "Gene Green Untouchable: the Career of CIA Agent 012." It was an immediate success, with all 10,000 copies sold within a couple of days, but it later came under attack for being too close to the real thing.

A Classic Comedy

Out of the 18th century and the age of specific theatrical convention and high style, comes th next production of University of Victoria's theatre department.

The play—The Beaux' Stratagem—is a landmark classic in the realm of English comedy. It is gay, ingeniously plotted, witty.

Directed by UVic theatre's Giles Hogya, it will open at the Phoenix Theatre Thursday and will run through Feb. 28, Sunday excluded.

Always a favorite with top-flight repertory companies and their audiences, The Beaux' was most recently revived by the Royal Shakespeare Company in London, with Maggie Smith in the virtuoso role of Mrs. Sullen.

The play is concerned with the adventures of two London dandies who go to the country to seek wives and fortunes. As the story proceeds, one rake remains true to his libertine principles, while the other in a welling of real sentiment, reforms.

This is a play of situation and character rather than manners. Wit is not used simply for wit's sake. There is plenty of action and little verbosity; the characters are well rounded and subtle.

Since coming to UVic four years ago, director Hogya has designed lighting for between 15 and 20 shows. He teaches graduate directing, lighting gr design and a course entitled Introduction to the Theatre. He has taught first year directing, child drama and stagecraft.

In 1974 he directed Brecht's Threepenny Opera as a joint production of the theatre department and Victoria Theatre Guild.

Reservations can be made at the Phoenix box office, 477-4821, between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. daily.

Carole Does It Best on Her Own

By DAVE MARSH

ROLLING STONE

Popular music's reigning romantic, Carole King, is back with her first album since 1974, Thoroughbred, which is her best one since "Tapestry" and "Music" in 1972. The pastoral fantasies of her last record, "Wrap Around Joy," are mostly gone now, and with them her weakest lyrical collaborator, David Palmer. (The one song on "Thoroughbred" written by Palmer seems like a "Wrap Around" leftover.) More than ever, King moves with great vulnerability through a landscape where "only love is real — every else illusion," but she moves with a new knowingness. Even the album's most optimistic songs, "So Many ways' and 'Only Love Is Real,' are touched with melancholy. In 'It's Gonna Work Out Fine,' she takes the humorous Ike Turner title, and quotes musically from it. But her concern is with the consequences of living in the marital trap.

King is working with her long-time collaborator, Gerry Goffin, once more, but the best songs are written by her alone. Similarly, though she puts David Crosby, Graham Nash and James Taylor to effective use as backing vocalists, the strongest singing on the album comes when she goes solo. The melodies are almost invariably first-rate (except, perhaps, 'We All Have to Be alone'), and her piano-playing is more dominant than ever. Whatever questions her last album may have raised about Carole King's continued strength as an artist are dispelled with "Thoroughbred."

Jim Capaldi has a voice that would make a perfect match for Carole King's oldest songs — 'Goin' Back,' say, or 'Up on the Roof.' He sings 'Love Hurts,' the old Roy Orbison B-side almost as well as the original, and, in fact, seems most comfortable with the kind of pop-rock popularized in the early '60s by Orbison and Del Shannon. Backed by the Muscle Shoals Rhythm Section and his Traffic cohort, Steve Winwood, Capaldi sings more effectively on "Short Cut Draw Blood" than he did on either his first solo LP or on most of Traffic's records. Unfortunately, when he moves into mood music similar to Traffic's on the last three songs on Side Two, the whole affair disintegrates into Moody Blues jelly. He'd be far better off sticking to songs rather than jams next time.

"For the First Time" (Motown M6-859S1) ought to have been an auspicious debut for Stephanie Mills, who sings the role of Dorothy in the Broadway hit, "The Wiz." The record is also the first collaboration of songwriter-producers Hal David and Burt Bacharach since they quit doing Dionne Warwicke several years ago. But the problems are overwhelming: the classic Bacharach-David pop song structures can't be easily grafted onto modern Motown disco riffs. In addition, Mills is not terribly well-developed as a pop singer. Her phrasing is extremely theatrical and consequently unconvincing, and on record her 17-year-old voice sounds less mature than Michael Jackson's did at 12. It's also true, of course, that the voice itself has more potential than any I've heard in a long time. Still, Mills is going to have to learn to use it more adeptly before she can make the big records it deserves.

Public Announcement

Ottawa, February 6, 1976

During the Canadian Radio-Television Commission's recent public hearing in Vancouver which commenced on February the 2nd, the Federal Court of Canada issued a writ of mandamus requiring the CRTC "to hear the application of Capital Cable Co-operative for a cable television licence to serve the Greater Victoria Area . . . and before renewing the licence of Victoria Cablevision Limited."

In accordance with its procedures, the Commission had not accepted the competing application of Capital Cable Co-operative, pending the hearing of Victoria Cablevision's application for renewal of its licence, expiring March 31st, 1976. The Commission advised Capital Cable Co-operative that it could intervene in opposition to Victoria Cablevision's application for the renewal of its licence and that if the Commission decided not to renew the licence, the Capital Cable Co-operative and other interested parties would have the opportunity to apply for the licence.

At the public hearings in Vancouver and Victoria the Commission was to consider a number of licence renewal applications and many other applications which were closely related to these licence renewals. In order to consider the implications of the Court's decision on its procedures, the Commission adjourned those hearings.

The Commission has now had an opportunity to fully consider the implications of the Order on renewal applications and its future hearings. The Commission noted that to follow the direction of the Court would, in the language of the Order, "create administrative problems". There are approximately 1,900 broadcasting licences in existence in Canada which have been issued for terms not exceeding the maximum of 5 years allowed by the Broadcasting Act, and these licences continuously must be considered for renewal. The procedure suggested by the Order could result in a very significant change in the regulation of Canadian broadcasting. The issue raised by the Order is an important aspect of administrative law and practice.

In light of the potential, far-reaching, consequences of the Order of the regulatory process, the Commission has concluded that it should appeal the Order to the Federal Court of Appeal.

In the meantime, the Commission finds it necessary to continue with its full schedule of public hearings, in order to hear numerous applications for the provision of broadcasting services to the Canadian public. The hearing of the applications which was adjourned during the public hearings scheduled for Vancouver and Victoria, will be resumed in the near future.

Avalanche Warning

SEATTLE (AP) — The U.S. forest service has issued a special warning to mountain climbers, cross-country skiers and snow shoer because of "an unusual avalanche hazard", in the Cascades and Olympics.

A spokesman said a hard, icy layer has been created over the mountain snowpack, and more than a foot of snow has fallen on top of it, with more snow and winds forecast.

"This situation is highly dangerous — there is nothing to hold this new show, and in many places it is going to avalanche," the spokesman said.

Now's the Time to Start Pruning . . .

GARDENING
jack beastall

In west coast gardens fruit trees are pruned, sprayed and fertilized during the latter part of February. There are several methods of pruning, generally based on the commercial orchardist's desire for a large tree and plenty of fruit. In the home garden we prefer a smaller tree bearing a medium crop of high quality fruit.

Winter pruning (Feb.) results in more replacement wood during the following Summer pruning, not recogning, it builds a bigger tree. Summer pruning, no recognized commercially, reduces the amount of foliage which in turn reduces the amount of food produced and, over a period of years, builds a mature tree that is some 10 feet shorter.

Before we go to books to learn the art of pruning it is helpful to have a clear understanding of the terms most commonly used. In diagram A, on the left side of the illustration, the parts of a tree are shown.

At (1) we have the dwarfing rootstock and at (3) the budding point where the named variety of fruit was attached to the roots. This point must always be about 3 ins. above soil level; (4) is the main stem or trunk and (5) the main leader.

Shown at (2) are sucker growths which always come from the roots and are useless for propagating another tree the same as the one they come from; (6) are waterSprouts which result from improper pruning; (7) is a branch with the branch leader at (8); a lateral or lateral growth at (9) with lateral leader at (10); a sub-lateral at (11) and a side shoot at (12).

Tree butchers lop off anything they don't like, regardless of the damage it does to the tree. Tree pruners carefully consider the tree as a whole, its roots, its stem, the branch placement, habit of growth, habit of fruiting, and the amount of growth normally made each season, the latter depending on weather and the condition of soil in which the tree is growing. Successful pruning is much more than sawing off branches and snipping off shoots.

The idea that a tree does not bear fruit if it is not pruned is false. The tree's interest is in producing seed and it will produce seed if at all possible. But the seed casing (the apple, pear, or plum) may not be an edible fruit. One aspect of pruning is to limit fruit production to what the tree can handle and improve the quality.

The idea that severe pruning will make a smaller tree is also false. When masses of top growth are removed, twice as much is made the following season. When masses of new growth are being made, flowering is inhibited and crops are poor until the top growth is again in balance with the root. When this balanuce is correct, the tree makes a normal amount of growth each sesoon and fruiting is normal. By the time a severely pruned tree gets back to normal balance it will be twice as large as it was originally.

An unpruned tree (apple, pear,or plum) will make fruiting spurs (see detail C) at a certain age. These spurs make growth the first year, bear fruit the second, make a new spur the third, and fruit again in the fourth. Thus the trees are biennial bearing.

Since the gardener wants fruit every year, he prunes side shoots in the hope they will produce fruiting spurs in the off years, and later to encourage new fruiting spurs to replace those which wear out. Apple spurs are good for about 10 to 15 years, a pear spur 8 to 10 years, and a plum around 5 years. The pruner must be able to distinguish between wood buds and fruit spurs. Amateurs who cut off "all those twiggy bits on a branch" have to wait five or six years for new fruiting spurs to be made.

Cherries and peaches do not have fruit spurs, both bear fruit from flower buds made the previous season. New growth is encouraged and old growth removed, the opposite to spur-fruiting trees.

All sweet cherries are large trees, getting larger each year with the fruit at the top. Any drastic pruning on a cherry or a plum results in "gum splits" which are difficult to heal and eventually cause die-back of branches which progresses until the tree is killed. Then sucker growths start from the roots and the gardener has the major problem of root removal. Severe pruning on any tree can cause a rash of sucker growths because the root supplies more energy than the tree can use.

Peaches will stand severe pruning. Some gardeners cut the tree a foot above soil level once every 15 years and start a new tree from the strongest of the resultant growths. Young trees are said to bear the most fruit, but on the coast the crop depends on weather at blossom time.

A peach branch with wood and fruit buds is shown at E. Some wood and fruit buds can be removed to allow in light and to space the fruit. The three top wood buds are saved to draw sap to the fruit, and one wood bud at the base of the shoot to make the replacement shoot for next year's fruit. The shoot bearing fruit can be cut off with the fruit attached at picking time.

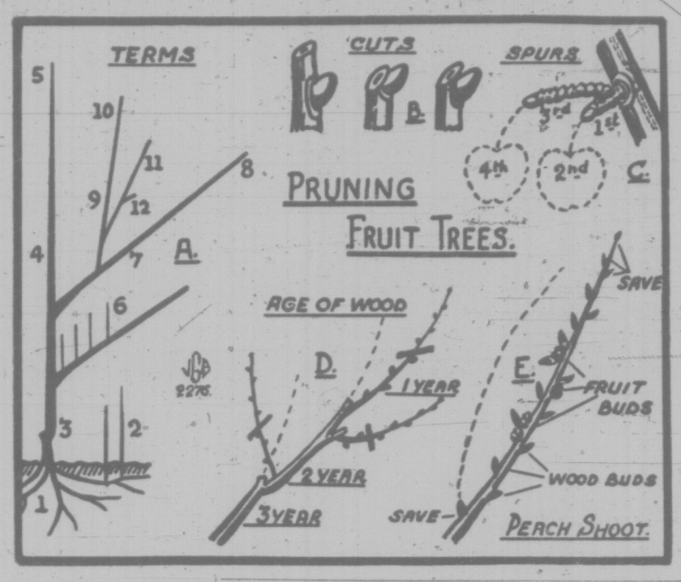
Leaders are cut back to the centre of last year's growth. Centre buds are much stronger than tip buds and make better branches. Drawing D shows one, two, and three-year-old wood.

Pruning cuts are shown at B. The one on the left is too far past the bud, and as it dies back it could cause rotting of the bud.

The centre cut is too close to the bud and could damage the bud tissue causing it to wither. The cut on the right side is about perfect, on a slope, the high part directly above the bud and the base of the cut just behind the top of the bud.

A tree properly pruned from the time it was planted, can be handled in twenty minutes by one who knows pruning, and a third of that time will be spent studying the tree and deciding what and where to cut. Never remove more than 10 per cent of the total top growth, is a good rule to follow. Severe pruning, or reconditioning must be spread over five years if trouble is to be avoided.

Clean cuts cannot be made with dirty, blunt tools. In fact it takes longer to clean and sharpen the tools than it does to prune 5 or 6 trees.



WORK FOR WEEK

To increase perennial asters on new roots, take rooted pieces from base of plants now; label, and set into flat of sandy compost in a covered coldframe. They make fine flowering plants.

Handweed bulb beds and other closely planted areas.

Check dahlia tubers in storage; keep them as cool as possible to prevent premature sprouting. Also check gladiolus corns and begonia tubers.

If yellow marguerites have short side growths, take off enough for rooting to make new plants.

Outdoor grape beds are easily renewed now in mild weather. Remove old soil down to, but not disturbing, roots; replace with well rotted compost.

Plant shallots, a form of very hardy onion, ready by end of July.

for better hearing

Will an operation help me? Certain types of hearing impairment are most certainly excellent subjects for surgical help. The operation may be a relatively minor one and the patient usually can leave the hospital the following day. Modern testing procedures can determine the advisability of an operation and anyone with a loss of hearing would be advised to explore this possibility since not all cases are suitable. The Ear Specialist will advise you. See your Doctor.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

Marine Biology Centre Eyed for Victoria

One of the founders of Pollution Probe has begun examining west coast conditions for setting up a new marine biology section for the Victoria-based Institute of Ocean Sciences.

He is Ralph Brinkhurst, 43, who was appointed last month to serve with Environment Canada under the marine sciences directorate to perform biological tasks supporting the work of physical and chemical oceanographers.

"It will not be biology for its own sake, but to help the oceanographers," Brinkhurst said.

The scientist comes to Victoria from the fisheries and marine service biological station at St. Andrew's, N.B., where he served for three years. Prior to that he was three years with the University of Toronto, home of Pollution Probe in its study of Great Lakes contaminatin.

Brinkhurst said among his first areas of interest on the Pacific coast will be Saanich Inlet, which is both convenient to his base at Patricia Bay and contains bodies of water supporting marine creatures relating to oceanographic phenomena.

Setting up a biological section where none has existed will be a new experience for him, carrying with it "a much greater challenge," he said.

Working side by side with professionals in chemistry and physics will offer these scientists the opportunity to direct Brinkhurst to study sites with which they are already familiar, rather than Brinkhurst seeking out his own field sites for original research.

For example, oceanographers would like to be able to determine more about physical and chemical processes at work in fjords and inlets where deep water mixes and exchanges at irregular intervals.

It is not known why, but this process sometimes occurs over a few months and sometimes it takes years.

"The process is not well understood," said chief of ocean physics Dr. Pat Nasmyth, who welcomed the prospect of using lower aquatic forms of life as indices of the timing involved in changes.

Scientists know that plankton follows a parent mass of water, thus are able to trace the migration of such deep bodies by sampling for minute organisms. These micro-creatures are sometimes better able to detect changes in chemical composition of water than are the chemical methods employed in a laboratory.

A biologist can study bottom-dwelling worms, bivalves and other creatures of the marine environment to pinpoint changes and durations within the environment.

Saanich Inlet is one of those in which the phenomenon of deep water mixing takes place.

Nasmyth said the new section will not compete with exisiting biological work being done at the fisheries biology station at Nanaimo, nor at the Pacific Environmental Institute in West Vancouver.

Brinkhurst said it is part of the evolution of Fisheries Research Board scientists into the public service and the more recently created Marine Sciences Directorate, and Environmental Protection Service.

Some biologists continue to perform research work related essentially to fish, as in Nanaimo and West Vancouver, and others support oceanographic work or aquatic sciences, as at Dartmouth, N.S., Bedford Institute of Oceanography marine ecology laboratory.

Eventually, Brinkhurst hopes to have a core of 10 working with him, including professionals and technical staff. But this may take a number of years to achieve, particularly with current spending restraints in the public service.

At first, Brinkhurst expected to attract temporary scientists on sabbatical leave from university research programs and to work with scientists from industry.

Brinkhurst was born in London, attended the University of London, taught and did research in pollution at the University of Liverpool before going to the University of Toronto in 1966.

Local Families in Dark Over Sons in Guatemala

Two Vancouver Island families, one in Victoria, the other in Nanaimo, are still waiting for news of their sons travelling in earthquake-ravaged Guatemala.

Gordon Hopkins, 20, of 3975 Cumberland Road in Saanich, was last heard from about two weeks ago. He and a female travelling companion were then in a small town about 50 miles west of Guatemala City but the family has had no luck trying to reach him.

Hopkin's sister Dora said the family had contacted the family of her brother's travelling companion in Texas, in the hope that the two might have contacted them, but the Texan family had heard nothing.

In Nanaimo, Mrs. L. H. Hardy has tried since Feb. 4, the day the first earthquake, to reach her son Godon, 23, in Guatemala.

Mrs. Hardy said she last heard from her son in a Jan. 31 letter written from Antigua, also heavily damaged by the quake.

She said she thinks Gordon may be in Guatemala helping to clean up the earthquake mess and because of broken communication lines, cannot reach her.

"We just have to hope," she aid.

Two young Duncan loggers phoned home Friday from a Mexican town close to the Guatemalan border.

Cameron Gunn, 21 and Bud Thornley, 19, told their families they left Guatemala the day of the first earthquake and that what was normally a three-hour journey took them nearly 10 days to cover.

Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Verchere of Ladysmith were also in Guatemala City the day of the quake and were awakened by the shaking in the night.

Mrs. Verchere, 70, said she thought her husband was shaking the bed to get her up for an early morning tour they had planned.

They fled outside and spent the rest of the night milling around in a park with hundreds of other people. Their hotel was not badly damaged and they were able to return there later.

Two days after the first quake, the couple was visiting nearby Antigua when the second quake struck. Their tour guide led them quickly back to Guatemala City because he was afraid a volcano might erupt.

They left Guatemala Feb. 7 to return home.

The number of British Columbians known to be in Guatemala is 14.

Trudeau Backed By Critic

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau delivered another message on the state of the Canadian economy here Friday and one of his most outspoken tnd enduring critics supported his control program.

"Why the hell shouldn't he say something nice about the economy, he's got it all in his mitts," said Margaret (Ma) Murray, crusty former publisher of the weekly Bridge River-Lillooet News, and a critic of Mr. Trudeau since he became prime minister in 1968.

Ma Murray and about 350 other residents of this south-central British Columbia city paid $25 a plate for a spaghetti-and-meat-balls testimonial dinner in support of the local Liberal association and Len Marchand, Liberal MP for Kamloops-Cariboo.

Between puffs on a cigarette Ma Murray said of the federal government's incomes and prices controls program: "I think it's a bloody good thing. And if the people are smart they'll cinch in their belts until their belly buttons touch their backbones."

Before the prime minister launched into an off-the-cuff speech, he made careful note of the date and the presence of Mrs. Murray.

"It's Friday the 13th and we have Ma Murray in the hall," he said amid laughter.

"The only person who can protect me from Ma Murray is Simma Holt and I hope they disagree on the Time magazine issue," he said. Mrs. Holt is a Liberal MP from Vancouver who opposes a government bill that would restrict tax deductions for advertising in Time.

The 55-minute speech, essentially a rehash of remarks he made in Vancouver Thursday night, was the prime minister's last official task in his five-day working visit to the province, which ended Friday. He plans to do some skiing on a local mountain today and will fly home to Ottawa Sunday.

He reiterated that the three-year control program was imposed to give all levels of government and the people of Canada time to learn that governments can't supply everything to everyone at once.

Earthquake Aid Benefit Show

A 10-hour benefit performance in aid of Guatemala earthquake relief will be held in the Bacchanalia Cabaret, 905 Esquimalt, starting at noon Sunday.

About a dozen musicians singers and featured performers will donate their talents to raise money for the Red Cross, hopefully to be earmarked for shelter to replace homes detroyed in the quakes, said organizer Ann Mackey.

The benefit has the backing of Esquimalt Mayor Art Young, MLA Charles Barber, Circle Craft Co-op and the Volunteer Bureau.

Among those taking part will be the Red Angus, and Thirsty Boots, both rock bands; country singer Dave Birtwistle, and vocalists-instrumentalists Kandy Keating, Richard King, Karen Roper, and the Mackey and McLean duo.

Minimum adult admission is $1, for which a Red Cross income tax receipt will be issued. Children are free.

Meanwhile, a benefit film show by photographer Jorgen Svendsen at 8 p.m. Thursday will be held in Victoria high school auditorium, not Oak Bay junior high as originally planned.

Svendsen, who will show movies and slides of Guatemala and other countries, said Oak Bay junior high already had been booked.

Easter Seal Goal Set at $75,000

The Greater Victoria Lions' Easter Seal Campaign has set a goal of $75,000 for this year's telethon.

The target is more than three times the $23,420 raised in 1975, the first year.

The 12-hour telethon starts at 4 p.m. Saturday, March 20, on Cable 10.

Premier William Bennett and Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen will officiate and a number of Greater Victoria performers and personalities will take part.

Numerous businesses and Victoria groups are helping.

Several hotels will compete for a plaque going to the one raising the most money, and a hotel union has started a challenge competition. One restaurateur will give a paid day off to the waitress who raises the most for the Lions fund.

On the telethon weekend volunteer high school students will solicit donations with the slogan "give a hand to help a crippled child."

Last year the Lions spent $345,511 on community projects which included Easter Seal buses, a swimming program, and support for Greater Victoria use of an Easter Seal house in Vancouver.

Chief organizer of the Lion's Easter Seal activities, Judy Nyquist, said that despite government subsidies the program ended the year with a $149,000 deficit.

She said a $75,000 telethon, $50,000 from Easter Seal envelopes compared with $39,000 last year, and a proposed third lottery would go a long way toward making up that deficit."

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A 91-year-old Victorian who flew as both an observer and pilot in the First World War will be in Winnipeg Sept. 9-11 to attend the biggest gathering of Commonwealth aircrew in history.

He is Lt.-Col. John R. Hopkins of 1975 Lee who received the Distinguished Flying Cross "for good service" in the days when the Red Baron was much more than a comic strip character.

In Winnipeg, Hopkins will join such aviation greats as Johnny Johnson, the Royal Air Force's top-scroring ace in the Second World War, the legless Spitfire pilot Douglas Bader, Arch Whitehouse, First World War fighter pilot with mord than 40 books on flying to his credit, and Adolph Galland, the German fighter general, who argued with Hitler and told Goering he needed Spitfires if he was to defeat the RAF.

Hopkins, who admits he doesn't know what prompted his invitation to Winnipeg, describes himself as a "shrinking violet" and is reluctant to talk of his service in both world wars. He wouldn't have his picture taken for this article.

He's a slight, quiet-spoken man but as he opens up you see glimpses of the young Canadian who enlisted with the Royal Canadian Dragoons in August, 1914, and volunteered for the Royal Flying Corps while serving in France.

First trained as an observer, Hopkins received his wings at Rendcomb aerodrome in Gloucester.

A picture in the family album shows him in front of his plane on a captured German airfield after the Armistice was signed. By that time he'd clocked 1,000 hours of flying time in BE2-D, RE 8 and Bristol fighters.

"We never went higher than 3,000 feet and it used to take us 20 minutes to get up that high," he recalls, "And we couldn't carry more than fuel for three hours."

Between puffs on his pipe, he ponders when asked for the experience he remembers most:

"It was when I was an observer and we were being attacked by a German aircraft. My pilot manoeuvred us into a position where I could use my rear gun. The German plane burst into flames and we saw a man fall out with his clothes all burning."

How did Hopkins feel at that time?

"I was very pleased it was him and not us."

Between the two wars Hopkins practised law in Swift Current, Sask., served in the militia and helped his wife, a Gloucester girl he married on a 14-day leave from France, raise four sons.

When the Second World War broke out Hopkins joined up again, this time with the Canadian Armored Corps. His sons joined up too. One served as a pilot with the Royal Navy Air Arm, two were in the Canadian army, one in the Royal Canadian Navy. One son, Hugh, was killed in Italy.

While her husband and sons were overseas, Winifred Hopkins did her bit by working in an army canteen.

Based in Rome, Hopkins received an unpaid leave of absence to tour North Africa, Egypt and Malta recruiting candidates for the Saskatchewan legislature.

"It was a political appointment," he explains, "One man was paid by Saskatchewan to work in Canada, another in England and I was given the countries bordering on the Mediterranean."

At 91, Hopkins still relishes new experiences.

Last year he received a diploma for the French course he took at the University of Victoria.

This year he's taking another university course, the study of modern French novelists . . . in French.

But he insists, "I'm really just an average person, nobody extraordinary."

ALPHONSE GOETZ

One of the strongest players in the chess salons of Paris in the 1890's was Alphonse Goetz (1865-1934). He won the championship of the famous Cafe de la Regence in 1888 and 1890, and the championship of France in 1914. The following miniature played in Strasburg in 1880 shows an original style by Goetz.

6. K-K2	QxKPch
7. K-B2	PxP—Knight mate (c)

(a) A continuation you won't find in any theoretical book—and for good cause.

(b) The worst move possible. Better would have been 5.N-KB3, P-N7 d.ch.; 6.NxQ, PxR; 7. N-KB3, but Black would win anyway.

(c) An extraordinary small adventure. The same pawn has made five out of the seven moves made, permitting it to come from its second row to the eighth rank, and making a Knight to mate!

The solution to the problem above is: 1.Q-B7,QPxP; 2.R-Q3 mate; or 1 . . . K-B4; 2.QxR mate; or 1 . . . RxKP; 2.N-N3 mate; or 1 . . . R4-B4; 2.N2-B3 mate; etc.

A Secondhand Book Cherished Commodity

HAY-ON-WYE, Wales (CP) — A seller of secondhand books, who regards his wares as among the world's most valuable commodities, is turning his attention to organizing the world's biggest secondhand book fair this year.

In fact, Richard Booth, 37, is so in love with the trade that he even tries to attract competition.

"The secondhand book is the most valuable commodity around," he said with the conviction of a man whose success has proved him right.

Twelve years after setting up business in a little 800 shop, the former fire station of this sleepy market town just over the border of Wales, Booth now has his headquarters in the Norman castle here, has taken over the old cinema, which houses four specialized book departments, has opened four other shops and a vast warehouse.

Several other shops have been opened by booksellers who have realized the rewarding possibilities of the town of books. Booth does not object to rivals—it was his intention to attract them.

"I would like to build a little town based only on books, build a wall round it and declare a central government!" he said in an interview. In the meantime Hay-on-Wye fulfils his purpose very well.

"We are bound to continue here, for there would be no way of moving the books out."

Every year at least three quarters of a million books arrive to restock his 15 miles of shelves. The railway was closed several years ago so the only approach is by narrow winding roads. That does not prevent up to 1,000 visitors a day coming to buy books. It is a non-seasonal trade, with many of the visitors from overseas. Internationally unique, Hay has become a major British tourist attraction.

Journalists, several from the United States, have described Richard Booth as the whizz kid of the book trade, the entrepreneur who markets books with the dedication too often reserved for washing-powder promotion.

His office is in the castle, which is so picturesque one feels it must have been mocked up for a film set. It is genuine, though. Legend says that in the 13th century King John, always labelled in history books as "The Bad," burned a witch there.

Booth does not look like anyone's idea of a whizz kid. He is large, untidy, wearing a wellworn pullover, his hair shaggy. He looks, indeed, like the traditional bookseller, more interested in what he sells than the price obtained.

"I am completely self-taught in this business," he said. "I was brought up by parents who took it for granted that there should be books around—that is the greatest help in one's real education. Then I went to Oxford University to read history and I got in with a little group, all of us very critical of the university approach to learning. Looking back I think we were pretty arrogant and impossible. None of us took a degree, and I think we were right."

In Oxford days, Booth was already thinking on the lines that more books could be made available to more people with a properly run secondhand book business.

Why did he choose Hay to put his theories into practice? It has only about 1,200 people and was, still is, undeveloped. There are a few old public houses, a couple of old-fashioned drapers, a few other shops and farms round about.

"It seemed to me an excellent centre," said Booth, "with the vast catchment area of Birmingham about 50 miles to the northeast and the industrial area of Wales to the southwest. Expenses are far lower than they would be in London. In Hay there is the whole magic of British history."

The books are bought from every possible source. Libraries, private collections, publishers' remainders, auctions, cottages which have cherished a few old family books. One young member of the staff had just been to a little cottage down a muddy Surrey lane in southern England, too narrow for his car. He had found, plus the usual junk, a number of exquisitely illustrated early Victorian children's books, currently much in demand.

Whether you are looking for a complete set of an early edition of Thackeray, a long out-of print travel book, a children's book that you remember nostalgically from nursery days, a bound volume of the Sunday at Home, you have an excellent chance of finding it there.

To keep up with secondhand copies of books of recent years is an overwhelming undertaking. "Two-thirds of all the books in the world have been published since 1952," Booth pointed out.

Special sections are devoted to the books of various countries, the American one being unusually comprehensive. Only a small number of the 150,000,200,000 books published each year in America ever reach Britain. Booth is remedying this situation.

He visits the United States at least three times a year, concentrating mainly on the eastern seaboard, and hopes eventually to open one or two shops there. Already he is concerned with one in Canada, opened by a friend in Toronto.

There are changing fashions in book demands.

"We can never get enough children's books or science fiction," said Booth. But eventually almost every title sells.

Remarkably, although the sales staff is small and there are none of those electronic-eye devices around, shoplifting is rare. Book lovers seem to have active consciences. There have been several instances in which a letter enclosing a cheque has been received from a customer who wandered off inadvertently with a book, or discovered he had been undercharged.

Richard Booth believes he has takes a great step toward non-institutional culture. He now is busy organizing Hay's Book Fair for August, 1976. Already jet flights are being organized to bring visitors to what will be the biggest fair of its kind ever held.

No wonder the Poet Laureate, Sir John Betjeman, recently described Richard Booth's venture as "the most important institution in the British Isles today."

Mediterranean-North Sea Link Begins

PARIS (Reuter) — Work is starting on an age-old project to link the North Sea and the Mediterranean through a canal connecting the Rhine and Rhone rivers.

The vast project, one of the most ambitious undertakings in Europe, will also link the Danube, opening up an integrated inland waterway network crisscrossing East and West Europe.

In a first phase the program provides for completion of the development of the valleys leading to the sea at Le Havre, Dunkerque, Rotterdam and Marseilles.

The main poles remain the Seine below Paris and the Rhine, both rivers now open to barge convoys totalling 15,000 tons.

The next stage will be to join the Dunkerque-Valenciennes canal to the Belgian network and finally the Rhine-Rhone link will join the Rhine near Mulhouse with the Seine at Saint Symphorien.

The French are pushing ahead with the project for fear of losing out to West Germany in the competition to capture new markets in Western as well as Eastern Europe.

Prospects for moving inland water traffic by 1982 between the Mediterranean and the North Sea, and ultimately towards the Danube states, will stimulate the industrialization of the European Common Market in general and the Rhone valley of southeastern France in particular.

It will be a vital asset for the port of Marseilles and its neighboring steel facilities at Fos, Europe's second-biggest harbor and marine industrial area after Rotterdam.

Work on the $1.3-billion project will begin at the Alsace end of the proposed canal.

The waterway, designed to provide a transport system for large barge convoys, will be about 140 miles long, and have 24 locks.

The reopening of the Suez canal and the extension of container facilities at Marseilles should boost the traffic potential to 10 million tons a year by 1985.

The project will provide activity for many of the firms and workers who were affected when Britain backed out of the Channel tunnel project last year. An estimated 30,000 jobs will be created.

The blueprint is expected to be ready in March and land cutting will begin soon afterwards, officials said.

Old Order Mennonite Honesty Backs High Fashion Industry

ST. JACOB'S, Ont. (CP) — Each morning Daniel Kraemer, 72, one of the best-known Old Order Mennonites in Waterloo County, drives down the main street of St. Jacob's in his horse-drawn dachwagle and stops in front of a modern shop.

The former farmer starts another day in his woodwork shop, one of the best-known businesses of its kind in southwestern Ontario. Over the last 20 years, since Mr. Kraemer put away his plow and quit his farm for village life, Kraemer Woodcraft Ltd. has developed into a business where $50,000 orders for high-fashion items are commonplace during a week.

Incongruous as it may appear the woodcraft company with its crew of Old Order Mennonites, who generally shy away from fashion or glamor, turn out some of the most sophisticated store fronts and interior decors in the province.

No female staff man the office—Old Order Mennonites believe women's place is in the home. But Mr. Kraemer and his son, Ivan, the mechanical genius of the firm, have their own office system. An office telephone is a necessary evil—Old Order Mennonites do not have phones on their premises—and most of the company business is transacted over it.

There are no contracts for a stenographer to type. Mr. Kraemer doesn't see the need for contracts. The kindly-faced Mennonite feels a handshake seals a bargain. He keeps his part of a deal and expects business associates to do the same. However, he is a shrewd businessman and has been known to turn down a business deal if he has doubts.

Orders which range from $10,000 to $50,000 flow in. Honesty has long been a characteristic of the Mennonites and the trained Mennonite work crews are swift and efficient.

When Mr. Kraemer retired from his farm, he had no intention of going into business. He bought a small house in St. Jacob's and settled down but after a while he grew restless. He began to make cedar chests to pass the time. Villagers eagerly snapped them up. He bought an empty shop down the street and added croquinole boards to his output.

The croquinole boards brought him unexpected recognition. Polished to a satin smoothness with patient hand polishing, they drew customers from all over the province. Soon he had orders from other areas in Canada. Dealers from the United States began to visit the shop. Today the croquinole boards, which never warp, are shipped as far distant as New Zealand and Europe.

Shy, Diffident, But Sakharov Still Renegade

MOSCOW (UPI) — The citation for the Nobel peace prize in its elegant blue leather binding is stuffed high in a bookshelf between a cardboard box and a pile of old magazines.

Andrei Dmitreyevich Sakharov has to think for a couple of seconds where he put it.

It's not that Sakharov has anything against the prize, awarded to him in his absence in Oslo, Dec. 10. He welcomed it for the attention it brought to his human rights struggle in the Soviet Union.

But the citation and Nobel medal which his wife somehow managed to get past customs are part of a material world that Sakharov seems to have rejected.

They are brought down and shown to the interested visitor, but quickly returned to place. Instead the wall is decorated with a couple of reminders of Mrs. Sakharov's recent stay in Italy — a pennant from the Pisa Rotary Club and souvenir dish towel from Florence.

Sakharov quickly directs attention from talk of the Nobel prize to his bulging plastic briefcase, from which he extracts an appeal for an imprisoned dissident, a protest or an open letter.

A visit to the Sakharov's tiny apartment is a bemusing experience.

This is a man who once stood at the pinnacle of the Soviet elite, the holder of a Stalin Prize and winner of three Hero of Socialist Labor awards for his work in developing the hydrogen bomb.

Yet he comes on like the typical absent-minded professor, shambling around in a homey cardigan, carpet slippers and baggy pants.

Sakharov is renegade No. 1 as far as the Kremlin is concerned, but it seems difficult to believe that such a self-effacing and diffident man could call so much abuse onto his head.

When Sakharov lost his temper and shouted to be allowed to enter the trial of his friend Sergei Kovalev in Vilnius, in the Soviet Republic of Lithuania recently, acquaintances were surprised at this lapse from his normally mild ways.

Even nowadays, Sakharov can go just about anywhere in Moscow without being recognized.

Sakharov's "press conferences" take place in his living-cum-bedroom, with reporters perched on spindly chairs or on the bed. The carpetless room is piled with boxes. An glass fronted book case holds family mementos but few books. Like most Soviet scholars, Sakharov has to reply more on libraries than on a private collection.

Sakharov and his wife share with most Muscovites a space squeeze that would cause claustrophobia to many Westerners.

The three-room apartment is also occupied by Mrs. Sakharov's mother, daughter and son-in-law, as well as the two small children of the latter.

Every available inch seems crowded with clothes, skis, ice skates and household impedimenta.

Children's squeals and cries can be heard from an adjoining room as Sakharov reels off allegations about labor camps, police searches or persecuted dissidents.

The space squeeze is compounded by the fact that the apartment is a refuge and meeting place for other dissenters, who edge into the kitchen around mugs of tea to discuss their problems.

Although his heart is on his sleeve, Sakharov remains a cool intellectual — a typical Russian "intelligent" of the old school who thought his way into the dissident movement rather than being pushed into it.

His wife, Yelena, complements him with an almost fiery energy and direct experiences — her mother was sent to a labor camp for 16 years in 1937 and she is the aunt of a Jew sentenced to death but later reprieved in the 1970 Leningrad hijack trials.

San Andreas Fault Swelling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Land along a large section of the San Andreas fault 40 miles north of Los Angeles has swelled as much as 10 inches, according to government scientists. Such ground swells sometimes precede earthquakes.

Adding to their concern is the location of the uplift astride a section of the fault that has stayed locked since a great earthquake in 1857, possibly causing a build-up of underground stress.

"The significance of the uplift is not fully understood," a U.S. geological survey spokesman said Friday. "We don't know enough to say it will be followed by an earthquake or it will not be followed by an earthquake. It's no cause for immediate alarm."

MACDONALD ADMITS SAMPLING

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald admitted in the Commons Friday that the Anti-Inflation Board is only monitoring a few selected firms to make sure they are following the government's price guidelines.

It is impossible to monitor the 6,500 firms who have been sent the requirements under the anti-inflation program and the selective monitoring procedure is the same as that carried out by the income tax department to check on tax returns, he said.

New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent charged in the House that the board is monitoring only 350 firms or five per cent of the 6,500 affected. Macdonald did not deny the figure.

Broadbent then asked the finance minister to identify the corporations being monitored.

Macdonald would not.

"The sampling would be an effective means of putting those reporting on their operations under scrutiny, and it will be known that a scrutiny is being carried on," the minister said.

The New Democratic Party also announced Friday it will call for an emergency Commons debate Monday on the decision of the anti-inflation board administrator against Irving Pulp and Paper of Saint John, N.B.

The company was fined $25,000 Friday and ordered to pay an additional $100,000 for payment of wages exceeding guides set by the board.

The fines prompted an angry reaction from labor leaders because the ruling is expected to have great impact on the pulp and paper industry in eastern Canada, where about 15,000 workers are currently on strike seeking pay increases of more than 14 per cent.

The Irving increases were in the 23 per cent range and were ordered rolled back to 14 per cent.

Henry Lorraine, president of the Canadian Paperworkers Union which represents most of Irving's 500 employees, called the decision an "outrage" and promised the union would appeal the ruling to the federal cabinet.

"It's called strike-breaking," Lorraine said, "and no matter how you cut it, the prime minister of Canada, the members of his cabinet and the Liberal back-benchers who keep them there are party to just that — strike-breaking.

"And we're going to raise political hell."

Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the ruling upsets the collective bargaining procedure.

A spokesman for Irving said the company will comply with the ruling although it has not yet decided whether to appeal.

He called the $125,000 fine regrettable, saying the company had contravened the controls to allow its employees a chance to appeal the wage restraints.

Revenue Minister Bud Cullen told reporters the ruling was correct under the controls program, but added it was not entirely fair that Irving had to pay a fine in order to open an avenue for appeal.

Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the anti-inflation board, said he was pleased that the administrator agreed with the board's decision.

A True Love Story For Valentine's Day

By SALLY QUINN

NEW YORK — She had long blonde curls and large blue eyes. He had flaming red hair and freckles. She was eight and he was nine. They were in the third grade — army brats together in Kyoto, Japan — and they were in love. The year was 1950.

Every day at recess he would chase her around the playground trying to kiss her, and every day she would run away. All the boys would egg him on, and all the girls would help her get away.

She hated it. Every day she would plead with the teacher to let her stay inside during recess. She made up excuses, saying she had a stomach ache, saying she had to study, even once saying she had TB, something she had heard her parents discussing at home. To no avail.

This went on all year. Then, on Valentine's Day she came to class and found a huge, red and lacy Valentine on her desk. It said: "I love you and I'm gonna kiss you today."

It was too much. She had had enough. True love or not, this was Armageddon.

Recess came and everyone was primed. He began his onslaught. She ran around for a while, playing out the charade, then stopped. He stopped, too, stunned. He moved a step closer but she did not run away. Then another step. She stayed. His heart began pounding, anxious that he might have to go through with it. The boys were cheering and shouting daring him.

She stood her ground. The other girls stood there too, with widened eyes, in fear that he would actually kiss her, in admiration for her courage.

Finally he got within a few steps of her. He was trembling and his face was bright red. She stood her ground.

He hesitated for a second, just long enough for the boys to fall on him with jeers and shouts of "chicken".

He couldn't take it. He pounced. He had got within an inch of her when she leaned over and took a deep, vicious, bite out of his pink, freckled cheek. He let out an anguished howl and the other children gasped in horror. Blood began to pour from the cheek and he ran screaming, crying into the school building. She just smiled a tiny little smile and went off to jump rope with the other girls who watched her quietly.

He had to have several stitches and tetanus shots and he stayed out of school for several days. When he came back he never looked at or spoke to or tried to kiss her again.

She was severely reprimanded by the principal and told that if she ever bit anyone again she would be expelled. She promised she wouldn't. She didn't.

Two decades later, she was in New York around Valentine's Day attending a big opening night theatre party.

She wore a long black chiffon caftan, turquoise and diamond earrings. She was standing, talking with some well-known actors, directors and politicians when, abruptly, someone lunged.

Before she knew what had happened, she had been bitten — hard — on the cheek. She looked up in shock to see a tall, handsome red-haired man with a tiny scar on his cheek. "I've been waiting to do that for 20 years," he said. "Happy Valentine's Day."

He turned and melted into the crowd.

Bombings, Violence Rake Belfast, London

BELFAST (UPI) — Bombings and violence raked Northern Ireland today for the third day following the death of a jailed IRA hunger striker, and Scotland Yard asked citizens to be on guard against hidden bombs.

Gunfire aimed at an army patrol examining burned vehicles in Belfast wounded one soldier.

Bombs badly damaged a linen store, a primary school and a butcher shop in Belfast today.

No one was injured. Two youths who planted the bomb at the linen store were seen running away, and the shop was cleared of customers before it went off.

A 30-pound bomb blasted stores and offices in the city centre's North Street.

A man forced to drive a hijacked milk truck in which the bomb was planted shouted a warning and the area was cleared.

Another powerful bomb planted in the town square at Dungannon, 40 miles west of Belfast, caused widespread damage to stores and offices.

In London, Scotland Yard appealed for public vigilance to counter new possible bomb attacks.

A shrapnel bomb planted in busy Oxford Circus subway station at rush hour Friday was defused before it went off.

A police spokesman, describing its discovery as a "miracle" that saved hundreds of casualties.

Rory O'Brady, president of Sien Fein, the political wing of the IRA, issued a statement condemning a series of bombings Friday in Dublin.

"Such incidents follow a familiar pattern and occur at times of tension and high public feeling," he said. "They are calculated to serve British interests in Ireland and sabotage protest demonstrations arising out of the death on hunger strike in England of Frank Stagg."

HOT LINE IN KITES

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan has been undergoing a kite boom this winter.

An estimated 92,000 Japanese children got their kites entangled in electric power lines during the country's four-day New Year's holiday, power comanies said today.

They said the results were short circuits and outages that cost them $1.5 million.

The Japan federation of electric power companies reported in a survey of the problem that five persons were killed trying to retrieve kites from power lines and 21 others were injured.

Ottawa Has Second Look At Deal with Lockheed

Times News Service

WINNIPEG — Defence Minister James Richardson said Friday night the purchase of 18 Orion long-range patrol aircraft from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. is being reviewed.

"Lockheed's financial strength and business reputation has been weakened by recent events," Richardson said.

"We have to review the situation before we proceed with the contract now under negotiation."

He said cabinet gave its approval in November to negotiate a deal with Lockheed to replace the Argus anti-submarine patrol aircraft. The negotiations were being conducted by the department of supply and services, the government's buying agency.

Meanwhile, the two top executives of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., shaken by bribery scandals rocking governments around the world, resigned Friday and were replaced by the former head of the New York Stock Exchange, who reportedly plans to be a temporary "conscience" for the defence industry giant.

Lockheed, the largest U.S. defence contractor, was struck by the bribery issue while still trying to recover from years of money problems that brought a $250 million Congressional loan guarantee to stave off bankruptcy in 1971.

Daniel Haughton, 61, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, and Carl Kotchian, 61, vice chairman and chief operating officer, submitted their resignations at a special meeting of the board of directors.

Robert Haack, a director from outside Lockheed's management ranks, was named interim chairman.

Haack, president of the New York Stock Exchange from 1967 to 1972, is a 35-year veteran of the eastern securities markets, experience he will need to handle dealing with major banks over Lockheed's $600 million debt load.

Pressure from Lockheed's worried creditors reportedly was partly responsible for the departure of Haughton and Kotchian.

A HARMFUL HOLIDAY?

OTTAWA (CP) — Creation of a new mid-winter holiday would damage the work ethic and encourage laziness, several Progressive Conservative MPs said Friday.

They were speaking on a private member's bill submitted by Mark MacGuigan (L-Windsor-Walkerville) to establish an annual holiday to be called national heritage day — on the third Monday of February.

The bill did not come to a vote.

General Killed

LAGOS (Reuter) — Nigeria's military government said today that Gen. Murtala Muhammed, the country's head of state, was killed Friday in an attempted coup by "young revolutionaries." The coup was crushed by the government. Radio Nigeria named Lt.-Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo as the new head of state.

B.C. Tel Profits Up 35%

VANCOUVER (CP) — A substantial profit improvement in the last quarter of the year helped boost 1975 earnings of British Columbia Telephone Co. by 35.9 per cent, to $33,909,000 from $24,960,000.

Profit in the final quarter jumped 88 per cent, to $11,781,000 from $6,685,000.

Announcing the year's result Friday, directors said a $973,000 extraordinary item helped lift total earnings for 1975 to $34,882,000. Earnings per average ordinary share were up to $1.32, from $1.11.

The extraordinary item was interest on funds set aside for an income tax settlement.

The company's earnings statement shows operating revenues for the year rose 19.1 per cent to $254 million.

Basil Beneteau, president and chief executive officer, attributed the fourth-quarter result to added activity because of the six-week postal strike and increases in both interprovincial and Canada-United States long distance rates.

Beneteau said 1975 was the first time in three years that operating revenue increases had outstripped the rate of increase of operating costs.

HELPING HAND AROUND HOME

A new weekly column for men and women who increasingly are being forced to do their own repair work in their homes will be published in the Times, starting Monday.

The writer is A. J. Hand, and the illustrated column is appropriately called "A Hand Around the House."

The current surge of do-it-yourself activity started in the early 1970s, instigated by the recession. As the cost of plumbers, electricians, carpenters and other repairmen went up, people also found a growing shortage of skilled craftsmen in these trades: too often one paid a lot of money and still got a bungled job. At the same time, it had become socially acceptable to do things with one's hands.

"A Hand Around the House" is not only for people who live in houses. Many of its subjects will be of interest to apartment dwellers, as well. It tells how to fix faulty faucets, toilets, drains, electrical cords and outlets, as well as how to repair roofs, walls, basements and the endless list of things that can go wrong in a house.

A. J. Hand's father is Jackson Hand, former handyman editor of Better Homes & Gardens and McCall's, and author of many standard books on home maintenance, painting, furniture refinishing and woodworking. The son grew in a workshop writer's environment, learned shop and home skills, writing and photography from his father.

home workshop editor and left the magazine in 1974 to home workshop editor and left the magazine in 1974 to research and write a book on alternate energy for the book division of Times Mirror Magazines. He still has ties to Popular Science, which is in daily contact with the home repair market.

Plans For Gay Future Went Off Track

By BRIAN WILLIAMS

LONDON (Reuter) — A millionaire Irishman and an English racehorse trainer have been found guilty of an amazing betting coup that might have netted more than £360,000 ($725,000).

The story of Gay Future, a four-year-old chestnut gelding, was unravelled earlier this month in a Preston court in northern England, where Irish builder Tony Murphy and racehorse trainer Anthony Collins were fined $2,000 each for conspiring to defraud bookmakers.

It started in the backroom of a pub in Galway on the west coast of Ireland in August, 1973, when Murphy allegedly conceived the plan that might have cost bookmakers $725,000. An alert clerk led to his downfall.

Murphy spent the next year perfecting his plan. On July 29, 1974, a four-year-old chestnut gelding was sent from Dublin to Collins' stables at Troon in West Scotland. Documents on the trip across the Irish Sea showed the horse was Gay Future. The animal, in fact, was a substitute.

Training gallops by the bogus horse were poor, assuring that the real Gay Future — still in Ireland — would not be well backed when he raced at Cartmel in North England.

On the first Monday in August, 1974 — a holiday in England — the real Gay Future arrived from Dublin for his English debut.

Travelling as an unnamed animal, the gelding was transferred to one of Collins' mobile vans on a lonely road near the Cartmel race course.

Collins formed a syndicate of Irishmen. They recruited a small army of bettors — nearly 100 — to place three-horse parlays on the real Gay Future with two other horses trained by Collins.

The syndicate knew the other two horses would be withdrawn from their races so that all the bets would go only on Gay Future.

The court was told by the

Life is a circle.

And now more than ever there is great fascination in days gone by.

All over North America people are being turned off by the fast-paced materialistic life and are seeking simplicity.

In many areas, city people have gone back to the land; to live in communes or just as a family and work the soil as the early pioneers did. Health stores selling organic foods are doing a roaring trade. And suddenly, it seems, everybody wants to build a log cabin.

Victorians are no different. They have flocked to the Provincial Museum for a chance to work like typical pioneers here in the 1850s.

Labor of Our Hands is a new and exciting program for school, adult and family groups. Funded by a Local Initiatives Project (LIP) grant, it was dreamed up by sponsor Sue Lambeth together with Barbara Avery, Gordon Lough and Bernard LeBlanc, who are the instructors.

It runs until May 16 but, says Sue, so great has been the response that all the classes, with the exception of the family-oriented sessions between 2 and 4 p.m. on Sundays, are full.

A course consists of three two-hour classes one week apart and gives those taking part a chance to dabble in such things as helping to build a replica of a Hudson's Bay-style log dwelling, making crude wooden furniture, spinning and quilting and country-style cooking with herbs.

Just what you do dabble in for most of your time depends pretty much on you.

"We're very flexible about it," says Sue. "We try to find out the particular interests of a group or an individual and concentrate on them."

Groups taking part now include the YM-YWCA, Big Brothers and the George Pearkes Clinic.

When I called in on Thursday, Grade 10 girls from Colquitz Junior High School were listening as Barbara Avery explained the making of pioneer-style dresses and Sue Lambeth described early cooking methods. That was in the St. Ann's Pioneer School, built in 1858 and situated next to the museum.

And not far away in the grounds of the old St. Ann's Convent, the Colquitz boys worked on the cabin with Gordon Lough and Bernard LeBlanc.

Bernard is "the mastermind behind the construction," says Gordon, and I watched as he "masterminded" the erection of one wall, aided by Art DeGirolamo and Brent Pottage of Colquitz.

The heavy eight-foot-long blocks of wood, eight inches by six inches, had to be lifted high and slotted in between the end supports. They were fashioned and smoothed with pioneer tools from the museum.

Hanging on the walls of the little work shed near the cabin are strange-looking broad axes, used for squaring, an old-style cross-cut handsaw and a frow for splitting shakes.

Right outside the shed, Steve Southwell sat astride the crude but sturdy little bench he was making and dragged a draw knife across the top to get it level.

Behind him, his Colquitz classmate Steve McCallum pounded a frow with a hand-made club as he split shakes for the roof.

And as I bade farewell and wandered off up the road, there was no buzz of a chain saw, no drone of power tools.

There was, instead, just the scraping of a draw knife and the dull thud of a club.

It was all quite tranquil and rather nice.

Budget's Chances Are Shaky

The Greater Victoria school board's $46.8 million operating budget won 11th hour approval Friday but two trustees said today there is a distinct possibility it will be sliced by the province.

Veteran board member Peter Bunn, main opponent when the board failed to approve the budget at a hectic meeting earlier this week, said he thinks the department of education will cut it and he hopes it does.

Board chairman Bill Ross said if the province is going to have trouble maintaining status quo education budgets this year, "then the chances are good we'll be subject to cutbacks."

Friday's emergency meeting of the board to reconsider the budget saw two of four trustees who voted against it earlier change their minds.

Hal Knight and Daphne Temple added yes votes to produce the necessary two-thirds majority in favor of a bylaw which adds $6.5 million in spending. Bunn and Lavinia Greenwood remained opposed.

Rejection of the bylaw Tuesday had the effect of turning back the entire operating budget.

This year's budget represents a 20 per cent increase over last year and the bylaw was required to approve spending beyond a 10 per cent increase.

Knight said Friday he had made his point earlier and would no longer oppose the budget, which he described as status quo and free of fat. Mrs. Temple did not explain her change of mind but had said earlier she had not realized the full implication of her no vote Tuesday.

Ross said today there has been much publicity about the 20 per cent increase but 17.9 per cent of it is required to meet union contract increases.

It's a status quo budget, he said, with the rest of the increase stemming from underfunding by the board last year.

The 20 per cent increase is still required after allowing for not replacing 32 retiring teachers in June, a move made possible by a declining school population.

Ross said that if the provincial government has the money to maintain education spending at last year's level, his board's budget will get by treasury board unscathed.

But Bunn said politicians, even at school trustee level, must look beyond their own spending to consider what's happening in the province and country.

He maintains the budget is inflationary but directs his criticism at union contract settlements. Salaries, wages and fringe benefits account for 84 per cent of the budget.

But he concedes his protest is based on a matter of principle rather than areas of the budget which could be easily slashed.

The province will face the same problem the school board did in cutting the budget because so much of the increase stems from contractual obligations, he said.

His message to union leaders is "this bloody nonsense" of spiralling costs, which benefit no one, has got to stop and there must be a return to stability in the economy.

Rescuers Pass Hat On Ferry

The B.C. Ferries' Queen of Sidney rescued two persons on Friday and passengers and crew passed around the hat to raise $560 for the survivors.

The ferry was on her noon run from Swartz Bay to Tsawwassen when she spotted a fire two miles away off Beaver Point on Salt Spring Island.

Capt. John Callan took the Queen of Sidney to the scene.

The smoke came from the 25-foot sloop Odessy of Mr. and Mrs. R. Majewski of Vancouver.

Odessy was on her way from Canoe Bay Marina to Vancouver when an explosion tore the boat apart and the Majewskis were forced to take to their eight-foot inflatable dinghy.

They escaped unharmed.

"They lived aboard the boat," a B.C. Ferries' spokesman reported. "When the people on the ferry heard this they whipped out the hat and collected $560 for them."

Bus Lanes, Streetcars Studied For Growing Western Sector

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Special lanes for buses are likely and electric streetcars a possibility as Greater Victoria's western community grows, a study on future transportation there says.

The study, prepared for the Capital Regional Board by Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd., consulting engineers and planners, says the best plan for a road network can't be made before a comprehensive regional transportation study.

In the meantime, it suggests priorities for building new roads and extending others and gives a general sketch of how public transit can be tackled.

For now, it says the Thetis Lake interchange with the Trans-Canada Highway remains the key element in transportation planning to link western community and city core, a point which won't come as news to commuters caught there daily in traffic jams.

The western community includes Colwood, Langford, Metchosin and the Highlands and it is the area designated in the official regional plan to absorb much of the region's growth over the next two decades.

The transportation study comes as planners near completion of a community plan for the western sector.

The area has a population of about 25,000 and this is expected to grow to 70,000 by 1996 and ultimately to about 150,000.

Depending on how much of the future population finds work close to home, planners predict rush-hour traffic 20 years from now could hit 15,000 trips an hour, better than three times the current flow.

Most intriguing aspects of the report are probably comments on development of public transportation, a subject where planners are starting just about from square one because there are now only 13 bus trips a day, including three from Sooke.

Unless public transit can offer a positive advantage, such as special lanes kept clear for buses, there's little incentive for people to leave their cars behind, the study says.

But such advantages work. When Lion's Gate bridge, between the north shore and Vancouver, is loaded to capacity, 40 per cent of it is bus traffic because buses are given an advantage.

"If the full demands for transit up to the 70,000 population level are to be met by buses, up to 100 express buses per hour to Victoria could be called upon, which would not impose heavy loads on the highway system as compared to the total flow, but which would be operationally inefficient."

When heavy public transit is funnelled into a particular corridor, as is the case between Victoria and western community, light rail, meaning electric streetcars, may be the answer, the report says.

The existing Canadian National Railway right-of-way make this approach a distinct, if expensive, possibility. A single track system, depending on passing place arrangements, could handle up to 5,000 passengers an hour in one direction.

Current estimates put the cost of a light rail system on an existing right-of-way at $5 million to $10 million a mile to build. Bus systems are considerably cheaper.

The report suggests this list of priorities in staged improvements to the road system:

—substantial improvement to capacity of Thetis Lake exchange, with special attention to priority for buses.

—improvement east of Thetis in corridor to Victoria.

—building a new north-south artery from Sooke Road to Goldstream.

—a new north-south artery from Latoria to Sooke Road.

Mayor Smith . . . pre-boarding privileges

He's 41 and Hurting

"I guess it's the price you pay when you're 41 and insist upon acting like a teenager," Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said this morning.

He was referring to a lively tennis game that ended in a twisted ankle, two torn ligaments and a knee-length cast.

The cast will be on for two weeks and it will be almost a month before full strength will be restored to the leg.

"My doctor says I shouldn't play tennis for at least two months. That's the unkindest cut of all. I love the game and it's the only way I can keep my weight down."

The tennis game was one of his tougher matches. He was playing on a Vancouver court against a Victoria girl, Alex Brown.

"She's an A player. She's good. She's very good."

"She was ahead so I was going all out. She lobbed the ball over my head. I went back to get it — and then it happened. I sort of twisted my ankle."

Despite the injury Smith will leave Wednesday for the Conservative leadership convention in Ottawa.

"It will be difficult to get around but at least I'll get pre-boarding privileges on the plane."

Uplands Residents Join Watch

Oak Bay police said today that contrary to a report in the Times Friday, residents in well-to-do Uplands and Beach Drive are taking part in the Neighborhood Watch program.

A spokesman said several meetings have been held with Uplands' residents who've responded to the crime prevention program "with great enthusiasm."

On Friday the Times reported 17 Oak Bay neighborhoods have organized under the program and involved about 200 residents in scattered parts of the municipality—except Uplands and Beach Drive.

Chief Finds Sweep Stub In Safe

A slip of paper worth a quarter-million dollars to Victoria Police Mutual Benefit Association has turned up safe in the chief's safe.

Chief constable John Gregory was out of town when the news came that the ticket — given to police by two grateful James Bay merchants — had been drawn in the Western Lottery.

But association president Sgt. Doug Grant wasn't sure where it had been put for safekeeping.

After returning to the city Thursday night and going to his office Friday, Gregory checked out the safe and came up with the stub.

"He was pretty sure he knew where it was," a member of the department said.

New Service For Hikers

The national parks branch this summer will establish a resource management area headquarters at Port Renfrew to provide information to people wanting to walk the West Coast trail from that end.

Frank Camp, superintendent of Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, said the staff will include a warden.

The trail improvement program on the 50-mile coast wilderness walkway will be continued, starting around mid-April, he said. This will involve moving the construction crew camp from a site near Nitinat Narrows to an area near Carmanah Lighthouse.

"From there we will work backwards and install a new suspension bridge across the Cheewhat River at Clo-ose," he said. "By the end of next summer about 35 miles of trail will be in tip-top shape."

The entire trail improvement project from Pachena Bay, near Bamfield, to Port Renfrew calls for the construction of 122 bridges and trestles, plus several miles of board walk.

Camp also said the parks branch is working on an interim information brochure on the trail. It will include a map, visitor facilities and trail highlights.

Meanwhile, the parks branch is being deluged with requests from all parts of the United States for information on the trail. One U.S. party plans to start walking it on Feb. 27.

It is estimated about 9,000 day and overnight walkers used the trail in 1975. Many were family groups, mostly from Vancouver Island.

Plots Assured Gardeners

Anyone whose name is on the Greater Victoria allotment gardens waiting list in the next few days can expect to have a plot assigned to him for spring planting.

Garden director Dick Keenpence, of the provincial agriculture department, said Friday there are 183 names on the list now, and that 154 new plots would be added to existing locations for the coming season.

About half of last year's plot-holders have re-registered. Until Feb. 28 these are given priority over new applicants. After that date the remaining plots are allotted in order of applications.

A $10 fee entitles a person without arable land — such as apartment dwellers — to a 1,000-square foot, serviced plot for 12 months.

The Holiday That Isn't . . .

Heritage Day is off but Heritage Week is on.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy announced Friday that proclamation of Monday as Heritage Day has been "recalled" by cabinet.

Instead, cabinet has designated next week as "Heritage Week" in recognition of Canada's heritage.

McCarthy said several provinces proclaimed Heritage Day "but there has been some confusion over the matter as a number of people have wrongly interpreted our action as making it a holiday."

"Any Heritage Day holiday that might be forthcoming would be Canada-wide and celebrated on a national rather than a provincial basis," she said.

Heritage Day was to be a statutory holiday, the third Monday in February to fill in the winter gap between New Year's Day and Good Friday.

Two year's ago it appeared the Parliament would declare the holiday, but the days slipped by and nothing happened.

There was talk again this year that the holiday would be declared during the current session, but again nothing was done and it was too late.

The Social Credit cabinet was apparently also considering proclaiming the holiday, but changed its mind and settled on Heritage Week instead and no holiday.

FLU SWEEPS BRITAIN

LONDON (Reuter) — An influenza epidemic is sweeping across Britain, swamping hospitals with patients, disrupting work in offices and factories and causing airport delays.

The number of victims soared to about 250,000 from 40,000 two weeks ago, says a spokesman for the Royal College of General Practitioners.

Sane People 'Held In Mental Hospital'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four persons considered by psychiatrists and review board members to be quite sane have been held at Riverside for many years because no government will take the responsibility of releasing them, Dr. John Duffy, executive director of the Forensic Psychiatry Commission said Friday.

Riverside — now called the Forensic Psychiatry Institute — is the holding unit for people who have been found "not guilty by reasons of insanity" by the courts; or needing psychatric assessment on the order of a judge. It also accommodates people found unfit to stand trial.

Duffy said "there are people who have been in there for years, perhaps 10 to 12 years, who originally came on being not guilty for reasons of insanity, for things like murder."

Duffy, himself a psychiatrist, said the mental condition of such people can be treated or may diminish in time.

"We have had medical authorities recommending release, review boards set up to determine if people are being held unnecessarily also recommending release, the recommendations have gone all the way to cabinets but have been refused again and again," he said.

He said he has addressed a cabinet committee in person about the condition of one patient, but release was refused.

TIRE FIRM ADS MUST RETRACT ON SAFETY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. will pay at least $750,000 to broadcast and publish tire safety advertising to settle a U.S. government complaint that previous advertisements misrepresented the safety qualities of Firestone tires.

The government had alleged that Firestone violated a 1972 Federal Trade Commission order with ads claiming that certain Firestone tires are safe under all conditions.

The ads said the tires were of superior quality without having full proof for the claim, the complaint alleged.

WHY THE CRIME CZARS REMAIN UNTOUCHABLE

OTTAWA (UPI) — Legislative restrictions on wiretapping make it impossible for police to go after top-ranking "untouchables" of organized crime, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said in a report Friday.

Under federal legislation police may obtain authorization for a legal wiretap only after showing they have reasonable grounds to believe the suspect is breaking a specific law. Fishing expeditions based on general suspicions are not allowed.

The Allmand report on authorized wiretapping in 1975 said the bugging operations resulted in a substantial number of prosecutions. But "none of these included the 'untouchables' of organized crime who . . . are not being investigated or detected because of the legal restrictions."

The most significant shortcoming of the wiretap legislation is the "apparent inability to respond to the clear and always present danger of organized criminals," the report said.

Such criminals are often able to hide their illegal pursuits behind legitimate fronts, i.e. the cunning executive, who is able to manipulate financial transactions to cover his real criminal activity, can go undetected until he commits a clearly identifiable listed offence.

"Although his associations, lack of legitimate income, his standard of living and lifestyle might well indicate nefarious dealings, there is no provision in law to detect his real 'calling' through interceptions," it said.

Last year's revelation that rotten meat was being marketed in Ontario and Quebec by organized crime would never had been made if present wiretap legislation had been in effect when the meat investigation began, the report said.

Allmand said that during 1975 a total of 563 authorizations to wiretap criminal suspects were granted and 451 authorizations were renewed.

Bookie-Bashing Scheme Smashed

prosecution that one member of the syndicate was Michael Morris, 27-year-old son of Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee.

Using taxis and chauffeur driven cars, the syndicate and their recruits placed small bets of £5 and $10 and £10 ($20) in betting shops all over London.

More than £4,000 had been wagered when an alert betting shop official noticed the money pouring in. Bookmakers stopped accepting bets and tried to lay off the wagers at the Cartmel track to drive the starting price down.

However, the course had been carefully chosen for the coup. It had no telephone links with the bookmakers.

Gay Future duly won the race by 15 lengths at odds of 10 to one. Then a bizarre incident took place.

Scotland Yard detectives had noticed the arrival in London of the group of Irishmen and feared they were Irish Republican Army (IRA) guerrillas. A special agent was assigned to the hotel where the group was staying.

The agent befriended the Irishmen in the hope of learning about terrorist activities and drove Murphy around London to collect his winnings.

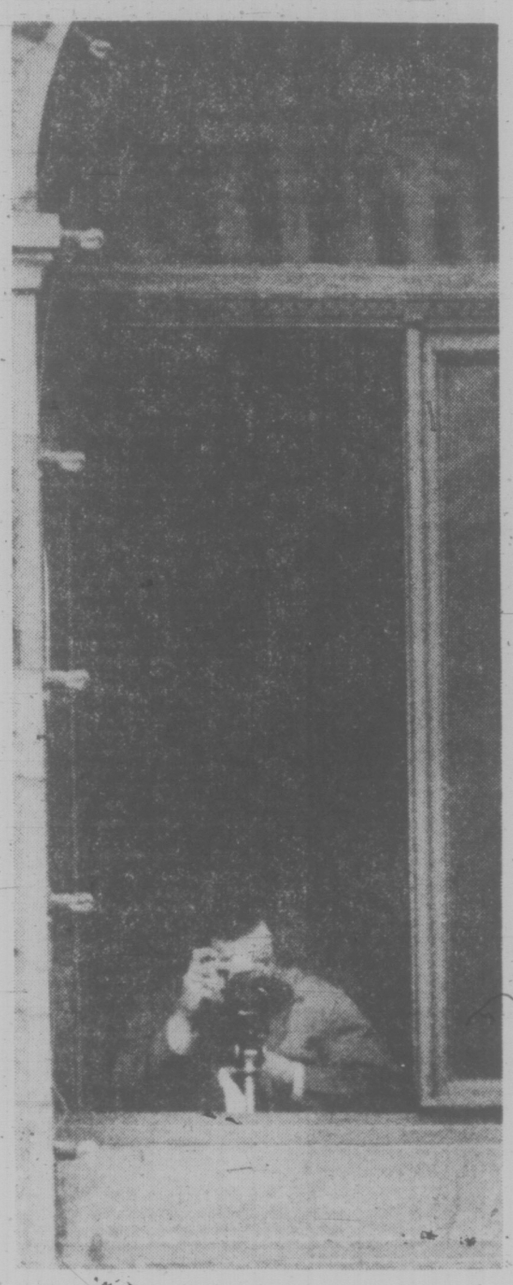
The syndicate had collected £6,000 before bookmakers stopped payment and set in motion the inquiry that led to the conviction of Murphy and Collins.

The bookmakers now have made sure they have telephone links with every race course in Britain.

And Gay Future? He fell and broke his neck in a race on the day the trial started.

Revolt in Saigon

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Security forces suppressed an "armed rebelliop" in the South Vietnamese capital of Saigon on Friday, the North Vietnam news agency reported today.



CAUGHT IN THE ACT. Victoria city police photographer had cameras turned on him at Friday's rally at the Legislative Buildings to protest insurance rate hikes. Police photographer had stationed himself in second-storey window with a good view of the 2,000-strong crowd, but demonstrators soon discovered him and took pictures of his picture-taking activities. The good-natured protesters sang and listened to speakers and there were no incidents. (John McKay photo)

Inquest to Start Monday On Car-Bus Crash Victim

An inquest will start Monday into the death of Anthony Daveron, 30, of 1142 North Park, Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Friday.

Daveron died in Victoria General Hospital at noon Thursday, five days after his car collided with a B.C. Hydro bus at Glanford and Vanalman.

Daveron suffered brain injuries in the mishap which also sent bus driver Richard Thomas, 34, and four passengers to hospital.

One of the passengers, Bessie Allen, 88, was in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital for two days after the accident, but has improved and is in fair condition.

Thomas was treated for leg and arm injuries and released. The three other passengers received minor injuries and were treated and released.

Police said the impact of the collision caused Daveron's car to be hurled 100 feet into a field. Damage to the bus was estimated at $6,000.

The inquest will open at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Sands Chapel, 1803 Quadra.

Yukon Towns Seeking Legal TV

OTTAWA (CP) — A new round of negotiations will begin next week in Whitehorse to determine whether the people of Teslin and other small Yukon communities will be able legally to watch television directly from the Anik communications satellites.

Officials of Telesat Canada, the government-private industry consortium that operates the three Anik satellites and a system of ground receiving stations, will confer with Yukon government authorities on proposals for licensing of ground stations for Yukon communities, a Telesat official said today.

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission, the federal broadcasting licensing body, Thursday granted a community group in Teslin, 114 miles southeast of Whitehorse, permission to run a low-power rebroadcasting station to bring television to the town of 350.

The Teslin group has been operating a television service for several weeks without federal licences using a $40,000 earth receiving station which was 90 per cent financed by the Yukon government.

The CRTC licence allows the community to operate the rebroadcasting station. No licence has yet been granted for the earth receiving station, a dishlike structure which picks up signals from the Anik satellite.

Telesat has objected to the Teslin operation because the company does not own the earth station. Telesat has offered to lease its own equipment to the town for about $14,000 a year.

An official said the negotiations will settle the question of whether Telesat or Yukon government-owned equipment will be used. The Yukon government wants to establish similar earth receiving and rebroadcasting outlets in seven other communities without television service. One objection to the Teslin ground station is that it is tuned to receive Canadian Broadcasting Corp. network signals from one Anik channel. This channel is sometimes used only as a back-up for technical messages and other non-broadcast communications during important events.

School, Hospital Row Faces Quebec

Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC — After admitting that an ultimatum issued last month to a common front of teachers and hospital workers has failed, the Quebec government fears that hospital labor disruptions and the growing number of work stoppages in the province's schools is paving the way to a major confrontation.

The province's public service minister, Oswald Parent, had threatened to break off negotiations within 48 hours if the unions continued their pressure tactics. The ultimatum was rejected by the unions, which then intensified these tactics.

The situation has led Parent to say that "we have reached a stage where there is an escalation of walkouts on one side and lockouts on the other in certain parts of the province. And if this is the direction talks are taking, I believe we are heading for a real clash."

Until recently it was difficult to gauge what line of action the government would take in negotiations with the 260,000 government-paid employees.

Some members of the Bourassa government appeared to favor a flexible approach. They believed the government should avoid useless clashes between employees and government negotiators.

Others shared the hard-line approach. Their strategy would go as far as the possibility of closing the province's schools and hospitals, pitting the people against teachers and hospital workers.

In 1972, similar events took place in schools and hospitals across the province prior to a general strike of a common front of government employees.

It ended with the jailing of three Quebec labor leaders who had defied back-to-work court orders.

The question is whether the government is expecting a crisis similar to the one experienced in 1972.

The nomination of former immigration minister Jean Bienvenue to the education portfolio, and Parent's threats to break off negotiations, gives the impression the government hasn't ruled out the hard-line approach this time.

Bienvenue is a man with a tough, law-and-order image, and has a proven ability for political scrapping.

And militant teachers in Quebec are not too happy with his appointment as the fourth education minister in six months.

Bienvenue is a "bigoted, arrogant country clod . . . an arrogant reactionary who has never had the slightest interest in education," said Donald Peacock of the Montreal Teachers' Association after the appointment.

Bienvenue, a former Crown prosecutor is cool and low-key in the Quebec national assembly.

But he has gained a reputation as the man who can do the "dirty work" for the Liberals.

Parent's nomination as public service minister in the summer of 1974 surely did not appear as provocation, although the Hull MNA does have a tougher image than other Bourassa cabinet ministers.

Yet Parent's style of negotiating appeared quite flexible in the beginning.

Parent, in the early stages of the talks, went out of his way to express confidence that he would reach a negotiated settlement with all employees before the new year.

The minister appeard calm and prudent in his statements, and gave the impression he didn't want to upset the good climate of negotiations.

He even went through a chest thumping session in the national assembly last fall when a settlement was reached with some 33,000 government public service employees, who aren't members of the common front.

But Parent's sober tone underwent a sudden change when, unexpectedly he threatened to break off the negotiations if pressure tactics didn't stop.

The ultimatum didn't appear to be designed to put a stop to the wave of pressure tactics, but rather to get tempers boiling among disgruntled rank-and-file members of the unions involved.

Most of the education sector employees gained the right to strike this week. In the hospitals, employees aren't allowed to strike until it is determined what essential services must be provided in case of a strike. About 50 per cent of hospitals have reached an agreement on essential services and the remaninder are expected to do so by early March.

Although Parent maintains that the ultimatum was not aimed at an escalation of the pressure tactics, it does appear as though the government isn't planning on putting a stop to them.

Coffins Sold Newlyweds

DORTMUND, West Germany (ISPI) — Newlyweds in this Ruhr city are asked to think about coffins along with wedding rings.

At the Registry Office after the obligatory civil ceremony, the bride and groom are given a leaflet entitled "questions on death that you can settle leisurely while living" which outlines modern burial techniques and procedures to be followed in case of death.

"It is better to think about such things today rather than tomorrow," the leaflet says. "In this way the wishes of the deceased can be respected."

WARNERS EXCEL

Aussies Prepare For Prawn War

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Fears of a bitter "prawn war" involving Australia, the Soviet Union and Taiwan, among others, are worrying officials here.

"It could make Britain's cod war with Iceland look like a storm in a teacup," said one fishery official in the state of Queensland. "The situation will be explosive to say the least."

The battleground is the huge Gulf of Carpentaria, which stretches 400 miles between Queensland's Cape York Peninsula and the Northern Territory. At stake is a prawn harvest valued at about $25 million.

Most of the gulf, one of the world's richest prawning grounds, is outside Australia's 12-mile limit in international waters.

But tough Australian trawlermen consider the gulf their territory.

They resent the intrusion of foreign fishermen—Soviet and Taiwanese among others—who also head for the gulf and its rich harvest each year.

Most of the catch ends up being frozen and exported to the United States and a good trawler skipper can earn anything from $50,000 upwards during the three-to four-month season. Crew members can earn up to about $20,000, so the competition gets fierce when a swarm of prawns is sighted.

Since the vast prawning grounds were discovered in the mid-1960s, hardly a season has gone by without at least one ugly incident.

Although government officials say reports are hard to check because of the remoteness of the gulf and the bond between the Australian fishermen, it is certain that shooting incidents have become more frequent.

Trawlers return to the tiny port of Karumba, the centre of the gulf's prawning industry, with the occasional bullet hole.

Incidents have continued with increasing intensity, although there have been no reports of serious injury.

"There have been stories of Australian fishing vessels chasing foreign vessels out of Australian waters, ramming foreign vessels at sea and shooting indiscriminately at foreign fishing crews," said Norman Hall, director of Queensland's state fisheries department.

"The question now is how far it will go before the other side retaliates.

"We don't want a fishing war in the gulf—but the situation is there and it's very real."

Marine Biology Centre Eyed for Victoria

One of the founders of Pollution Probe has begun examining west coast conditions for setting up a new marine biology section for the Victoria-based Institute of Ocean Sciences.

He is Ralph Brinkhurst, 43, who was appointed last month to serve with Environment Canada under the marine sciences directorate to perform biological tasks supporting the work of physical and chemical oceanographers.

"It will not be biology for its own sake, but to help the oceanographers," Brinkhurst said.

The scientist comes to Victoria from the fisheries and marine service biological station at St. Andrew's, N.B., where he served for three years. Prior to that he was three years with the University of Toronto, home of Pollution Probe in its study of Great Lakes contaminatin.

Brinkhurst said among his first areas of interest on the Pacific coast will be Saanich Inlet, which is both convenient to his base at Patricia Bay and contains bodies of water supporting marine creatures relating to oceanographic phenomena.

Setting up a biological section where none has existed will be a new experience for him, carrying with it "a much greater challenge," he said.

Working side by side with professionals in chemistry and physics will offer these scientists the opportunity to direct Brinkhurst to study sites with which they are already familiar, rather than Brinkhurst seeking out his own field sites for original research.

For example, oceanographers would like to be able to determine more about physical and chemical processes at work in fjords and inlets where deep water mixes and exchanges at irregular intervals.

It is not known why, but this process sometimes occurs over a few months and sometimes it takes years.

"The process is not well understood," said chief of ocean physics Dr. Pat Nasmyth, who welcomed the prospect of using lower aquatic forms of life as indices of the timing involved in changes.

Scientists know that plankton follows a parent mass of water, thus are able to trace the migration of such deep bodies by sampling for minute organisms. These micro-creatures are sometimes better able to detect changes in chemical composition of water than are the chemical methods employed in a laboratory.

A biologist can study bottom-dwelling worms, bivalves and other creatures of the marine environment to pinpoint changes and durations within the environment.

Saanich Inlet is one of those in which the phenomenon of deep water mixing takes place.

Nasmyth said the new section will not compete with existing biological work being done at the fisheries biology station at Nanaimo, nor at the Pacific Environmental Institute in West Vancouver.

Brinkhurst said it is part of the evolution of Fisheries Research Board scientists into the public service and the more recently created Marine Sciences Directorate, and Environmental Protection Service.

Some biologists continue to perform research work related essentially to fish, as in Nanaimo and West Vancouver, and others support oceanographic work or aquatic sciences, as at Dartmouth, N.S., Bedford Institute of Oceanography marine ecology laboratory.

Eventually, Brinkhurst hopes to have a core of 10 working with him, including professionals and technical staff. But this may take a number of years to achieve, particularly with current spending restraints in the public service.

At first, Brinkhurst expected to attract temporary scientists on sabbatical leave from university research programs and to work with scientists from industry.

Brinkhurst was born in London, attended the University of London, taught and did research in pollution at the University of Liverpool before going to the University of Toronto in 1966.

Local Families in Dark Over Sons in Guatemala

Two Vancouver Island families, one in Victoria, the other in Nanaimo, are still waiting for news of their sons travelling in earthquake-ravaged Guatemala.

Gordon Hopkins, 20, of 3975 Cumberland Road in Saanich, was last heard from about two weeks ago. He and a female travelling companion were then in a small town about 50 miles west of Guatemala City but the family has had no luck trying to reach him.

Hopkin's sister Dora said the family had contacted the family of her brother's travelling companion in Texas, in the hope that the two might have contacted them, but the Texan family had heard nothing.

In Nanaimo, Mrs. L. H. Hardy has tried since Feb. 4, the day the first earthquake, to reach her son Godon, 23, in Guatemala.

Mrs. Hardy said she last heard from her son in a Jan. 31 letter written from Antigua, also heavily damaged by the quake.

She said she thinks Gordon may be in Guatemala helping to clean up the earthquake mess and because of broken communication lines, cannot reach her.

"We just have to hope," she aid.

Two young Duncan loggers phoned home Friday from a Mexican town close to the Guatemalan border.

Cameron Gunn, 21 and Bud Thornley, 19, told their families they left Guatemala the day of the first earthquake and that what was normally a three-hour journey took them nearly 10 days to cover.

Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Verchere of Ladysmith were also in Guatemala City the day of the quake and were awakened by the shaking in the night.

Mrs. Verchere, 70, said she thought her husband was shaking the bed to get her up for an early morning tour they had planned.

They fled outside and spent the rest of the night milling around in a park with hundreds of other people. Their hotel was not badly damaged and they were able to return there later.

Two days after the first quake, the couple was visiting nearby Antigua when the second quake struck. Their tour guide led them quickly back to Guatemala City because he was afraid a volcano might erupt.

They left Guatemala Feb. 7, to return home.

The number of British Columbians known to be in Guatemala is 14.

Trudeau Backed By Critic

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau delivered another message on the state of the Canadian economy here Friday and one of his most outspoken and enduring critics supported his control program.

"Why the hell shouldn't he say something nice about the economy, he's got it all in his mitts," said Margaret (Ma) Murray, feisty former publisher of the weekly Bridge River-Lillooet News, and a critic of Mr. Trudeau since he became prime minister in 1968.

Ma Murray and about 350 other residents of this south-central British Columbia city paid $25 a plate for a spaghetti-and-meat-balls testimonial dinner in support of the local Liberal association and Len Marchand, Liberal MP for Kamloops-Cariboo.

Between puffs on a cigarette Ma Murray said of the federal government's incomes and prices controls program: "I think it's a bloody good thing. And if the people are smart they'll cinch in their belts until their belly buttons touch their backbones."

Before the prime minister launched into an off-the-cuff speech, he made careful note of the date and the presence of Mrs. Murray.

"It's Friday the 13th and we have Ma Murray in the hall," he said amid laughter.

"The only person who can protect me from Ma Murray is Simma Holt and I hope they disagree on the Time magazine issue," he said. Mrs. Holt is a Liberal MP from Vancouver who opposes a government bill that would restrict tax deductions for advertising in Time.

The 55-minute speech, essentially a rehash of remarks he made in Vancouver Thursday night, was the prime minister's last official task in his five-day working visit to the province, which ended Friday. He plans to do some skiing on a local mountain today and will fly home to Ottawa Sunday.

He reiterated that the three-year control program was imposed to give all levels of government and the people of Canada time to learn that governments can't supply everything to everyone at once.

Earthquake Aid Benefit Show

A 10-hour benefit performance in aid of Guatemala earthquake relief will be held in the Bachanalia Cabaret, 905 Esquimalt, starting at noon Sunday.

About a dozen musicians singers and featured performers will donate their talents to raise money for the Red Cross, hopefully to be earmarked for shelter to replace homes detroyed in the quakes, said organizer Ann Mackey.

The benefit has the backing of Esquimalt Mayor Art Young, MLA Charles Barber, Circle Craft Co-op and the Volunteer Bureau.

Among those taking part will be the Red Angus, and Thirsty Boots, both rock bands; country singer Dave Birtwistle, and vocalists-instrumentalists Kandy Keating, Richard King, Karen Roper, and the Mackey and McLean duo.

Minimum adult admission is $1, for which a Red Cross income tax receipt will be issued, Children are free.

Meanwhile, a benefit film show by photographer Jorgen Svendsen at 8 p.m. Thursday will be held in Victoria high school auditorium, not Oak Bay junior high as originally planned.

Svendsen, who will show movies and slides of Guatemala and other countries, said Oak Bay junior high already had been booked.

Easter Seal Goal Set at $75,000

The Greater Victoria Lions' Easter Seal Campaign has set a goal of $75,000 for this year's telethon.

The target is more than three times the $23,420 raised in 1975, the first year.

The 12-hour telethon starts at 4 p.m. Saturday, March 20, on Cable 10.

Premier William Bennett and Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen will officiate and a number of Greater Victoria performers and personalities will take part.

Numerous businesses and Victoria groups are helping.

Several hotels will compete for a plaque going to the one raising the most money, and a hotel union has started a challenge competition. One restaurateur will give a paid day off to the waitress who raises the most for the Lions fund.

On the telethon weekend volunteer high school students will solicit donations with the slogan "give a hand to help a crippled child."

Last year the Lions spent $345,511 on community projects which included Easter Seal buses, a swimming program, and support for Greater Victoria use of an Easter Seal house in Vancouver.

Chief organizer of the Lion's Easter Seal activities, Judy Nyquist, said that despite government subsidies the program ended the year with a $139,000 deficit.

She said a $75,000 telethon, $50,000 from Easter Seal envelopes compared with $39,000 last year, and a proposed third lottery would go a long way toward making up that deficit."
